Canadian shot as U.S. police violate border

OTTAWA (CP)—A chase into Canada by Buffalo, N.Y., police pursuing a truck is being investigated, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Monday.

The truck's driver, James Powless of Fort Erie, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital with a fractured skull.

His lawyer was quoted by police as saying the injury was caused by a bullet fired by Buffalo police during the chase.

Later, an external affairs spokesman said "informal expressions of regret" have been received from the U.S. embassy. The spokesman said no formal response was expected until investigation of the incident was complete.

Following the investigation, "appropriate comments" will be sent to the United States authorities, MacEachen told Derek Blackburn (NDP-Brant) in the Commons.

Earlier, immigration, external affairs and customs spokesmen said Niagara regional police and the RCMP were being questioned about the incident, in which the U.S. police fought with the truck driver and passengers after catching them at Fort Erie, Ont.

Blackburn requested that MacEachen's comments to U.S. authorities say "exactly what U.S. police can and cannot do in this country and assure that it never happens again."

The truck, bearing Ontario licence plates, was chased across the Peace Bridge early Saturday. Immigration officials said they were unable to get the Buffalo police to return to the U.S.

They eventually went back, but only after Niagara police were called to the scene by immigration officials.

Before the Buffalo police fled back across the border, they caught the truck and became involved in a fight with its occupants.

Killings mar IRA truce

BELFAST (UPI) — An open-ended Irish Republican Army cease-fire went into effect Monday night but a wave of random killings apparently aimed at Roman Catholics took at least five lives in 48 hours.

The truce called by the provisional wing of the IRA in its more than five-year war to try to drive British troops from Northern Ireland went into effect at 6 p.m. in Northern Ireland and Britain.

But it was overshadowed by a burst of killings of Roman Catholics, apparently carried out by fanatic Protestant gunmen seeking to keep sectarian tensions high.

More than 1,200 persons have died in IRA violence and counter-violence from the Protestant majority, which wishes to remain linked with the British crown, since the current strife started in August, 1969. The British army has been caught in the middle.

The latest killing came in a small Catholic-owned country pub at The Rock Village, 35 miles west of Belfast, five hours after the cease-fire went into effect.

The British army said one or two gunmen walked into the bar crowded with patrons celebrating the cease-fire and sprayed it with automatic weapons fire.

One man was killed and at least two more were critically injured.

Fifteen hours earlier, gunmen shooting from a cruising automobile shot and killed a 19-year-old Roman Catholic street sweeper in south Belfast.

Three others, all Catholics, died Sunday.

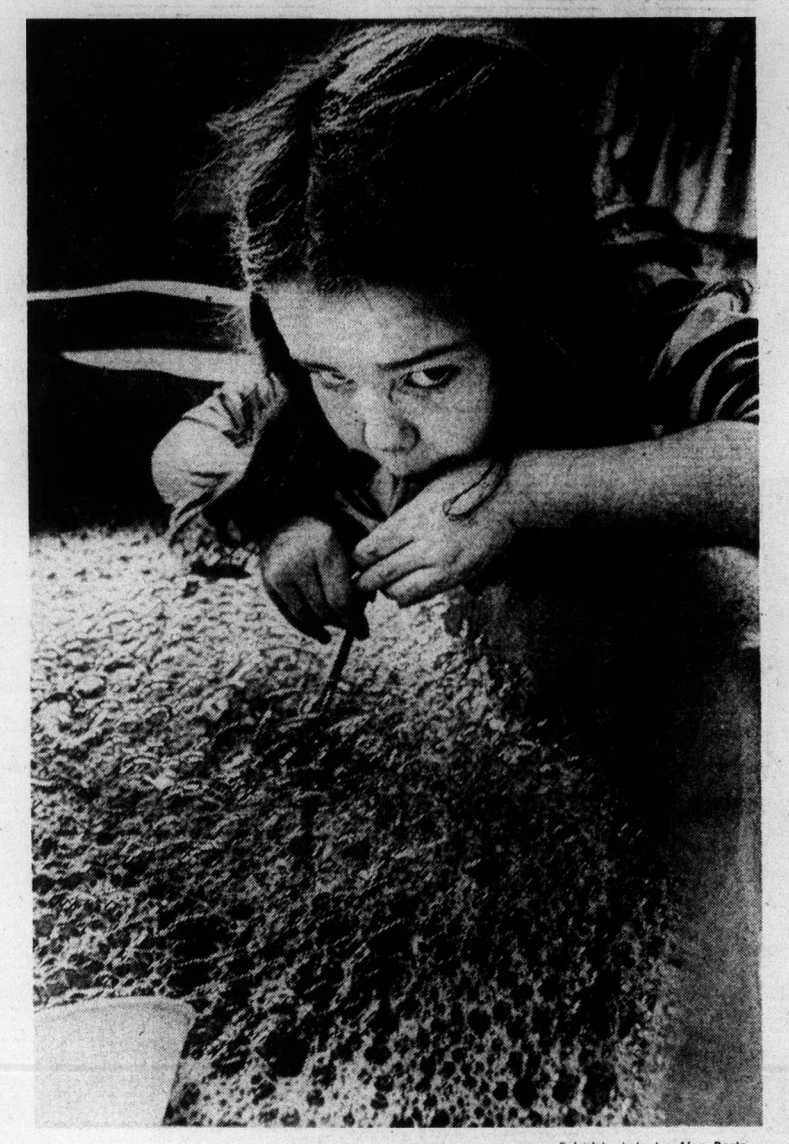

Secret negotiations between British officials and leaders of the IRA political wing, Sinn Fein, were said to have led to the truce. Terms of the agreement were not made public.

IRA leaders had said there could be no cease-fire unless the demands of 15 of its hunger strikers from Ireland's Portlaoise jail were met. The Dublin government refused but the truce was announced anyway.

It was preceded by a wave of apparently Protestant attacks against a Catholic community whose members support the IRA, the latest violence in the four weeks since the previous truce expired.

Curtailing court staff stops clash with CUPE

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The first court confrontation of the 15-day CUPE dispute was avoided Monday when the B.C. attorney-general's department agreed to CUPE terms for drastically-reduced operations at Victoria Provincial Court and two other centres in Victoria.

Spokesman John Marshall of the locked-out inside workers' Local 388 said: "The attorney-general's office agreed to the terms rather than take out an injunction."

His comment came at the end of a work day filled with rumors that the NDP government would go to B.C. Supreme Court today for an injunction that would keep Victoria Provincial Court at 633 Fisgard, family court at 2020 Cameron and the juvenile detention home at 1125 Pembroke in full operation.

A government source said a bid for an injunction was being considered, but Marshall's later announcement indicated the government had junked the idea.

The possibility of an injunction isn't over, however. Marshall said a new employee-pass system worked out with the government was only good for 48 hours.

Most workers in the three buildings belong to the B.C. Government Employees' Union. When the outside workers' Local 50 of CUPE went on strike Jan. 27, the building at 633 Fisgard was picketed because it is owned by the city.

The 20 BCGEU members who work in and around the three court sections decided not to cross the picket lines and courts were delayed two hours before passes were arranged for seven BCGEU members to keep basic court services alive.

Monday morning, newly locked-out Local 388 took a tougher stand, saying no passes through picket lines would be issued "until management agrees to sit down and negotiate in good faith — unless it's a matter of life or death, or public safety."

This meant CUPE pickets would stay outside the Victoria police station and firehalls, allowing policemen and firemen to do regular work but cutting off weekly supplies to main fuel tanks.

When present supplies run out, police cars and fire vehicles will have to go to service stations for replenishment at a cost higher than the city's supply contract.

The effect of Local 388's tougher stand was more drastic on these buildings:

Tax rebate buyers under B.C.'s guns

The provincial department of consumer services is planning its first prosecution against income tax rebate companies.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Monday a new regulation added to the Trade Practices Act and becoming effective this morning would enable her department's lawyer to proceed with prosecutions against income tax loan companies charging exorbitant interest rates.

The new regulation states that B.C. courts may now look into tax rebate schemes where the consumer receives such a small amount from the rebater that the result is judged to be "harsh or inequitable" to the taxpayer.

Ms. Young said the new regulation permitting her department to launch court action was "not a total answer" but that it would enable both consumers and her department to fight the worst cases in court.

Neither Ms. Young nor deputy minister William Neilson would name the worst offenders, or state when the first prosecution would begin.

"Just watch," Neilson said.

Ms. Young said her decision, with cabinet backing, to take action against tax rebaters came as a result of the reluctance of federal authorities to make the first move.

"Ottawa has all the power in the world to put these rebaters out of business," she said, "but the federal authorities are taking forever to crack down on these outfits." Ms. Young said all Ottawa had to do was make it illegal for a tax rebate to go to anyone but the taxpayer meriting the rebate.

While most tax rebate businesses came in for harsh words from the minister, she said the main thrust of her legal staff would be against those obviously charging too much for their "advance loans."

The minister said one of the worst cases her department had come across so far involved a company charging an interest rate so high that it worked out to 4,000 per cent annually.

She declined to name the firm, and when Neilson was asked if this would be the first company prosecuted, he again answered, "Just wait, just watch."

"This is not the first year tax refund buyers have operated in this province," the minister said, "but this year there seems to be a new twist to their operations. In previous years, a person who sold his refund for an agreed percentage — say 50 per cent — usually received that 50 per cent in cash immediately.

"This year, people are selling their refunds in the same manner and, we think, under

Hamburgers better than prime rate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Bank of America asked some children to define the prime interest rate.

"That's easy," said Mark Cabrera, 10. "Mom cooks it when we have company. It's expensive. I like hamburgers better, anyway."

Darren Scola, 11, said the prime rate "is a new game — like Monopoly."

Jeff Crenshaw, 9, said his father had exceeded the prime rate while driving and got a ticket.

Rebels on offensive in fight for airport

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — Fierce battles with rifles, bazookas, rockets and machine-guns were reported Monday night in a rebel attempt to gain control of the airport at the besieged northern provincial capital of Asmara, where one-third of the Ethiopian armed forces are bottled up.

Diplomatic sources said Ethiopian troops apparently repulsed the attacks on Johannes airport. The field is the only supply link to northern Eritrea province, with land routes already severed by Moslem insurgents demanding an independent state.

During the day Ethiopian jet fighters bombed rebel zones north of Asmara and a government unit lured out of the city was ambushed and virtually wiped out, the sources said.

Reliable reports said the insurgents had passed word to the army that it could repair a damaged generator, but when engineers and their escorts arrived they were cut down in a crossfire. Casualty figures were not available.

Diplomatic sources say heavy fighting that erupted about two weeks ago has left 4,000 dead, wounded or missing among the rebels, government troops and civilians.

They reported the Addis Ababa military government, worried about the fate of 20,000 soldiers encircled in Asmara, has sent truce overtures to the Eritrean Liberation Front. But the popular Liberation Front, a Marxist faction that joined the ELF, immediately rejected any ceasefire. A front spokesman in Beirut, Lebanon, said there is "no choice but to continue fighting as long as Ethiopia occupies our country."

Diplomats believe the 20,000 troops sent to hold Asmara are one-third of Ethiopia's military strength, and the government fears its manpower is spread too thinly to maintain control in other revolutionary-minded provinces. The Asmara army units are battling an estimated 6,000 rebels who are well equipped with sophisticated weapons supplied by sympathetic Arab countries.

Week-old news grabs attention

There was something familiar about the CBC's National news on Channel 2 and 6 last night — it was a week old.

Somebody in Toronto, where the program is taped and then transmitted for the various time zones via Anik satellite, picked up the Monday, Feb. 3, reel by mistake.

CHECK-TV in Victoria was jammed with phone calls, of which about 50 got through. CBUT in Vancouver was so besieged that the telephone exchange plugged up, registering a busy signal after five digits were dialed. CBC Toronto just wasn't accepting calls.

The rerun program and the phone calls went on until near the end of the broadcast, when an apology went on the air.

CBUT then broadcast the correct tape, but CHECK went ahead with its own local news.

"Well, we know people are paying attention, anyway," said a harassed CBC employee.

Onassis better after operation

PARIS (UPI) — A spokesman for shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis said Monday the Greek millionaire underwent an operation over the weekend at a hospital where he is being treated for a mysterious illness. "It was a small operation and now he is feeling much, much better," a spokesmen said.

What is teen heiress' fate?

In triple-killer's clutches

LONDON (UPI) — Police disclosed Monday that missing teenage heiress Lesley Whittle was kidnapped by Britain's most dangerous criminal, a triple killer known as the Black Panther and the Hood.

Miss Whittle, 17, was kidnapped from the bedroom of her home in Highley on Jan. 14. The kidnapper subsequently telephoned a demand for $120,000 ransom, but never showed up at the rendezvous point to pick it up.

No trace of Miss Whittle, who inherits $480,000 from her late father's estate when she turns 21, has been found.

A police spokesman said a nationwide hunt is on for the kidnapper, "the most dangerous criminal at large in Britain." A reward of $60,000 has been offered for information leading to his arrest.

Police broke a two-week news blackout on the case to say the kidnapper was definitely the same man who killed three postal workers with a shotgun last year in the Midlands.

"This wanted man is a cold, very calculating individual who is ruthless when cornered," Detective Chief Superintendent Robert Booth said. "Don't have a go at detaining him. Tell us your suspicious and we'll do the rest."

Booth said the definitive clue in the case was the kidnap getaway car, found 150 yards from where night watchman Gerald Smith surprised the man and was shot down by him. Smith lived to provide a description.

The nicknames Black Panther and the Hood are derived from the fact that the man dresses in black and occasionally wears a hood.

According to the police, the man is between 30 and 40 years old, stands about five-foot-six and is of slim, athletic build. He is said to have carried out more than 100 armed robberies.

The reward for information leading to his arrest was offered by the National Federation of Subpostmasters, whose membership includes the three shotgun murder victims.

B.C. to hit rebaters

the same impression. But, instead of getting their full percentage now, many of them are only getting a small part of it now and have to wait for the balance of the rebate until the tax buyer receives the full refund from Ottawa."

Ms. Young said another reason for the sudden action was the economic down-turn now being experienced.

"We fear that many more people may be victimized by these unscrupulous operators than ever before," Ms. Young said. "There are people who have been laid off their jobs recently and have refunds coming who may be tempted to go to these people. We urge everyone to avoid all tax rebaters and mail their (tax) forms to Ottawa and wait for the whole refund."

People who can't wait, the minister said, "should shop around for a loan at a bank, trust company, credit union or consumer loan company."

Asked if her general advice to people seeking tax rebates from sources other than the federal government also applied to credit unions, some of which are offering tax-rebate loans this year, the minister said, "No. We are encouraging people who can't wait to go to a credit union where they will get a fair shake. They would even get a better deal from a consumer loan company than they would from these unscrupulous firms."

Neilson said both the minister and himself wanted to re-issue a challenge to the tax rebate buyers.

"You will recall that a year ago the minister had a lively debate with certain representatives of the tax rebaters," he said. "We challenged them at that time to open their books because they constantly proclaimed the difficulty of doing business profitably with this low class of clientele that they allegedly have.

"We said that if their difficulties were so great, then correspondingly their profits must be low and we would like to have a public survey made of their records. They haven't accepted that challenge. We would like to issue it again."

New Soviet missile trouble for Saigon

LONDON (UPI) — Western defence sources said Monday an improved model of the Soviet hand-carried SAM 7 surface-to-air missile is being battle-tested with great effectiveness by communist forces in South Vietnam.

The improved missile is light enough to be carried by soldiers, but effective against aircraft at heights up to 15,000 feet.

The SAM 7 has been supplied to Hanoi by Moscow lately and has been largely responsible for South Vietnamese air losses in recent fighting, the sources said.

Earlier versions of the Soviet-made SAM missile played havoc in the October, 1973, Middle East war with American-supplied Israeli planes. These were notably the SAM 4 and SAM 6, with some early SAM 7s involved, too, according to the sources.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies in London listed the early SAM 7 among the weapons in Egypt's armory.

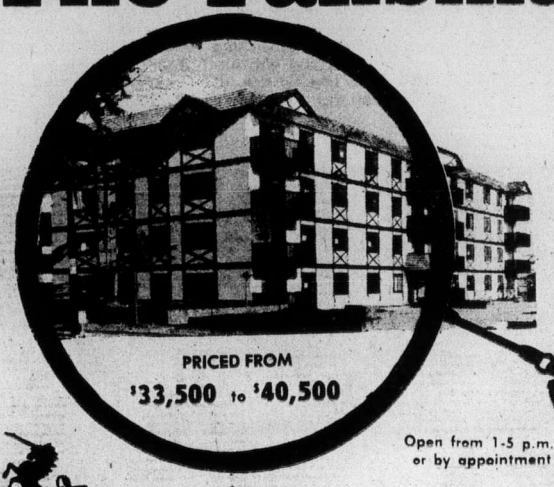

The defence sources said it must be assumed that Moscow has supplied them in quantity to the Syrians, Moscow's closest ally in the Middle East, as part of large-scale arms deliveries to replace war losses.

South Vietnamese officials admit the heat-seeking SAM 7 is causing them trouble and has made deployment of their air force more difficult. New tactics apparently are being developed to elude the missiles.

Egyptian sources reported a new arms agreement with the Soviets following the visit to Cairo last week of Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. But there is no reliable indication that the new SAM 7 missiles are among them. The Russians have been withholding latest weapons from Egypt because of their unresolved political differences.

But if the developments in Vietnam are an indication of things to come, the SAM 7 can be expected in the view of the defence experts to play an important part if fighting in the Middle East flared up again.

Clash avoided

● Provincial Court — There will be three employee passes instead of seven, plus two deputy sheriffs instead of four. The result will be only one court each day instead of three, and the traffic ticket wicket may be unmanned.

Sources said the single court will be for new arrests and remands only, with District Judge William Ostler presiding, and all or most trials will have to be delayed. Management personnel may take over the ticket wicket or it may be moved today to another location.

Officials said in the first week of the dispute that commissionaires were continuing to work under a city contract but $2 parking tickets would not increase to $5 until 72 hours after the end of picketing.

● Family Court — Two employees will receive passes so family maintenance receipts and payments can continue. A third will be allowed in to deal with the nine juveniles held at the Juvenile Detention Home, with the understanding no more will be lodged there.

The sources said most family court sittings would cease, but the two judges could still hear new charges. It was considered more likely that most arrested juveniles would be released to their parents for hearings later, or might be taken to courts in Duncan, Nanaimo or Vancouver.

● Juvenile Detention Home — For security purposes, one supervisor guard will be given a pass to work with the one management official in the building. If that's too thin for 24-hour security, management personnel from family court may fill in.

Other than the 48-hour life of the new passes, the next problem is a pass system worked out early in the dispute for deputy sheriffs, which runs out later this week. If it is not renewed, the sheriffs may stop escorting prisoners between court and jail, or between Victoria and other cities.

Your good health

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been bothered with neck and shoulder pains. X-rays were taken, and I was found to have arthritis in my spine. The doctor said my upper ribs were fastened to my spine.

Could you explain? — Mrs. L.O.M.

I believe you are referring to what is called a "cervical rib."

At the top of the spinal column are a group of seven vertebrae that make up the neck section. Each of these has a small projection of bone jutting out sideways called "lateral processes."

Occasionally in the lower vertebrae of this neck section, one of these processes may tend to be exceptionally long and, for want of a better term, this has been referred to as a cervical (neck) rib. It can become painful, especially when the bone exerts pressure on nerve trunks in the area.

Meany fears 'depression'

Labor chief sights 10% jobless rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO president George Meany predicts the U.S. unemployment rate may be 10 per cent by this summer.

And that could be bad news for Canada as well, since effects of unemployment in the U.S. usually spill across the border.

Two days after the U.S. labor department reported 8.2 per cent of the U.S. workforce was unemployed in January, it projected an annual average of 8.1 per cent, saying the jobless rate will slowly recede by 1980.

Meany disagreed Sunday. "I think unemployment may go to 10 per cent by July," he said.

Meany said his organization's projections are "much more realistic" than the administrations because "we don't put a political figure in it. We don't depress them (the figures) because of political considerations."

Meany was interviewed on CBS-TV's Face the Nation.

He said the situation is actually worse because the official government unemployment figures do not reflect the actual job market.

"We don't count the underemployed, we don't count those who have become discouraged and are no longer looking for jobs. When you stop looking for a job and you stop registering for a job, you are considered employed. If you work two days a week you are considered employed. The figures do not reflect the extent of the unemployment.

"This country is going into a depression . . . we've got to take some measures like you take when you are fighting a war . . . you do a lot of things that you wouldn't do otherwise."

Meany said the administration's economic policy was the "blueprint" of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns.

"He's the architect," Meany said. "He is still running the show. His attitude is inhuman. He doesn't understand people. All he understands is his economic theories and they are completely out of date."

Among Meany's recommendations: 6-per-cent home mortgages, one million plblic service jobs, and spending $2 billion for accelerated public works projects.

"All of these things have got to be done to meet this problem but I don't think the White House or the U.S. Congress realize the dimension of the problem and the problem is getting worse every day," he said.

Nurses may face charges

FREDERICTON (CP) — Nurses in New Brunswick were being urged Monday night by their representatives to go back to work following a New Brunswick Supreme Court decision earlier in the day.

The decision, handed down by Mr. Justice John Bugold, extended an injunction ordering nurses at the Victoria Public Hospital in Fredericton and at Hotel Dieu in Campbellton back to work.

The decision denied a second request from provincial government lawyers that the injunction be extended to cover those nurses who had resigned but whose resignations had not taken effect.

Bugold indicated charges were possible against individual nurses. He said, if necessary, each nurse could be served with a copy of the decision stating that if the order is not complied with then "the proper means be taken to bring them before a court of justice."

In granting continuation of the injunction in the Fredericton and Campbellton cases, Bugold said he had no hesitation in saying that "these so-called resignations are not in fact genuine."

Oil worries

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada might be running a worrisome balance-of-payments deficit by the mid-1980s because of high-cost oil imports, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Monday. It will depend on how much domestic oil is discovered and brought into production in the meantime, he said in the Commons.

'Dangerous'

VANCOUVER (CP) — An intensive police search of the Lower Mainland continued Monday, but no trace was found of escaped prisoner Donald Oag, 25, who told a policeman Sunday he would not be taken alive. Officials warned the public that Oag was "extremely dangerous" and that motorists should avoid picking up hitch-hikers.

Surveillance

OTTAWA (CP) — Elmer Mackay (PC—Central Nova) said Monday that Seamen's International Union funds apparently are being used to keep a union dissident under surveillance by two Toronto-area private investigators. Mackay's bid for an Ottawa probe failed.

No rationing

HOUSTON (UPI) — Shaking his fist for emphasis, President Ford told cheering Texas oilmen Monday there would be gasoline rationing only "over my dead body." Ford pledged his energy policies would mean development of "American oil on American soil."

Grass gripe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer Reports, the journal of the Consumers Union, has prepared an article for its March issue challenging recent medical claims that marijuana smoking damages the human body.

Savings plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced in the Commons Monday an amendment to extend to April 1 the deadline for joining registered home savings plans. The amendment was presented by Finance Minister John Turner because debate has bogged down.

THE BOARDROOMS OF CANADA DON'T HAVE MANY WOMEN.

WHY NOT?

Policy decisions made in Canada's boardrooms have a tremendous influence on our lifestyles. They affect the price of our food, the style of our clothes, the design of our homes, the quality of the goods we buy. Yet most of the women you see in Canada's boardrooms are serving coffee to the men who make those decisions.

The strange thing is that, so far as we know, no company has a charter forbidding women to sit on the board of directors. And there is no legal barrier blocking the way.

So why aren't more of us reaching the boardroom? Why aren't there more of us at the mid and upper management levels? Are we so conditioned into believing that only men have careers that we automatically hesitate when we reach the fifth rung on a ten-rung ladder? Or is the ladder pulled out from under our feet if we take one step too many?

Perhaps the answer lies with us. Perhaps we should all look upon every job we tackle as being a career. Being a housewife is a career and a demanding one. Being a mother is a career and a rewarding one. But, if we want to be bankers or brokers, carpenters or caretakers, printers or politicians, why not? Why don't we refuse to accept prejudicial barricades? Why don't we follow the examples of those who have proven it can be done?

Maybe we've all been conditioned into not caring enough. Maybe. But, if a law, a precedent or a prejudice stops any one of us from pursuing any career we choose, then we should try to change it. We should make our voices heard. We should talk to each other and to those whose influence we need. Politicians, husbands, friends, teachers, newspaper editors.

And we should talk to the men on the boards of directors. As equals.

RICHARD BOWER — Publisher and Editor-in-Chief

An 'artful dodger'

IT IS ONLY SINCE his re-election last July that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has admitted the fact of inflation in Canada. Before that day of decision, which saw the Conservative party's program for emergency controls to slow the economic toboggan rejected by the electorate, Mr. Trudeau equivocated in the face of criticism for his government's inaction. At first he had denied that the nation faced a critical situation; and then, by July 4, in Victoria, he was saying:

"The Opposition is saying inflation is the issue in this election. I tell you it's not inflation, but the problem of inflation and the finding of a solution that is the issue."

This sort of ambiguity and evasiveness allowed him to escape an honest admission of the gravity of a problem that had been apparent to consumers for months.

Now, safely established in office, Mr. Trudeau can afford to confess to the nation's dilemma. Indeed, he has become alarmist. Having scoffed at the Conservatives' formula for wage, price and profit controls, he now warns:

"We are going to make a more just society . . . Everyone will have to accept a slightly reduced salary so that more people can be put to work . . . It's going to be a tough year in 1975."

But apart from this vague intimation of policy, and a warning from Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier that the government proposed to "get tough" with civil service wage bargainers, there is really very little known of government intentions beyond the secret cabinet conferences.

In the United States, President Gerald Ford has announced individual and corporate income tax cuts, cash aid to the very poor, higher taxes and tariffs on oil, supplemental aid for state and local governments to meet higher energy costs, a moratorium on federal spending except for energy development, and a 5 per cent limit on federal pay raises.

(The Democrats want delay or roll-back in a variety of price increases, but without wage controls.)

It is not recommended that Mr. Trudeau should follow this or anyone else's pattern for stabilizing the economy. But taxpayers are entitled to be told the specifics of the administration's planning.

Last September after the federal-provincial conference, Mr. Trudeau arrogantly and misleadingly announced that provincial governments were reluctant to take tough measures to combat inflation. The inference was that because of a lack of support the federal authority was shackled and to such an extent that it could not take effective anti-inflation action.

All ten provinces angrily joined in rebuttal, holding the remarks of the prime minister "hardly demonstrate the leadership we are seeking from the federal government."

"It is a matter of regret and concern," said the joint statement, "that at a time when the premiers of Canada are gathered in an attempt to deal conscientiously with matters dealing with the state of our economy and to find ways of effective co-operation in this regard that we should be confronted with a statement of that kind."

So far the rebuke has failed to move Mr. Trudeau to the disclosure of any plan to negate its justification.

Firearms control

SENATOR DONALD CAMERON of Alberta never gives up hope although at times he must be tempted. He has been trying since early in 1973 to get Senate approval of a bill imposing much wider and stricter controls of firearms. It would require registration of all firearms, including sporting rifles and shotguns now exempt from such an obligation under the Criminal Code. It also calls for permits to carry all guns and for training in the use of guns.

But Senator Cameron has been unlucky. After the bill was first introduced it received prompt second reading and was sent to a standing committee for consideration, but had not been reported back to the Senate when the session ended nearly a year later.

At the next session the proposed legislation was re-introduced, again received quick first and second readings and again went to the committee — and died there through the dissolution of Parliament. But once more, last fall, it went through first and second readings and was referred to the committee on legal and constitutional affairs, where it awaits action. And according to the senator, "letters are just pouring in asking what action is being taken."

There are signs that the government is not unaware that the "letters are just pouring in," because it has been reported that it now has in mind legislation of its own originating in the House of Commons to impose further gun control.

But it was primarily at Senator Cameron's bill that representatives of a dozen national and provincial associations struck last Saturday when they met in Ottawa, arguing among other things that registration of sporting and hunting guns would impose an unfair, restrictive burden on three million Canadian gun-owners, would do nothing to hinder criminals, and would hamper police in doing their normal duties.

All those letters pouring in, however, would suggest that the preponderance of Canadian opinion is to the contrary, and indeed the head of Firearms and Responsible Ownership Inc., a national gun association which called the meeting, almost said as much.

Gun owners, said William Jones of Hull, are being made the scapegoat of the politicians — "We're the easy target. You can release a lot of pressure by talking gun control."

If there is so much pressure, the politicians are duty-bound to feel it.

"It's negative, vague and indecisive—has the making of an excellent policy . . ."

Now it's 'responsible enterprise'

Confused with slogans

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

While Finance Minister John Turner is trying to soften union resistance to voluntary wage restraints, Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie is working the business end of the government's vision of a "social contract."

The other day Mr. Gillespie preached a sermon to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

The speech studded with a jumble of cliches (e.g.: "There are storm signals for all to see," although "no tidal waves have reached our shores, but international waters are unsettled," and so on), would be hardly worth noticing except for a strong hint of the course the government intends to steer in economic and social policies. The Gillespie speech may thus contain a glimpse of the thrust of the economic and social programs Prime Minister Trudeau intends to reveal soon to the country.

Assuming that Gillespie's speech writers reflect the philosophy of background discussions in East Block, the emphasis will be on transformation of the remnants of the free private enterprise system into something called "responsible enterprise."

Gillespie put it this way: "The traditional description of our system as one of 'free enterprise' springs from an era in which a few individuals brought enormous initiative to the task of effecting the industrial development of a sparsely-settled continent. In recent years, with the need to concentrate production into large units so as to take advantage of modern technology, the expression 'private enterprise' has seemed to be more appropriate.

"Today, I believe that all participants in the Canadian economy — businessmen, labor, farmers, consumers — will be better able to contribute to our national well-being if they can see themselves as part of a system of 'responsible enterprise,' in which all parts are accountable, one to the other.

"The essential element in this system of responsible enterprise — which I believe is what has evolved in Canada whether or not we have previously recognized it — is this element of accountability. And it applies equally, I believe, whether the enterprise be a private one or a government one."

That sounds fine, indeed admirable, as a theoretical proposition of rational management of our complex economy on the premise of equal performance and accountability of all its segments.

In practice, as can be seen from the long history of legislative efforts to regulate and harmonize vested interests of the key segments of the economy, equal performance is rare and equal accountability does not exist.

Whatever Mr. Gillespie (or his speech writers) may believe, the accountability of private enterprise differs substantially from the accountability of governments and trade unions, because private enterprise must be not only socially useful but economically sound to survive.

While it is true, as Mr. Gillespie pointed out, that elected government shoulders the broadest scope of responsibility by being accountable to all segments of society, the accountability is basically political, not economic.

A government is deemed successful if it retains sufficient popularity to get re-elected. Popularity, unfortunately, is not synonymous with responsibility, let alone efficiency.

The quest for political popularity is often pursued at the expense of basic requirements of sound economic management. (For example, systematic government overspending and waste that caters to public clamor for "free" services is sure to do wonders for political accountability but may ruin the economy.) In the context of political expediency, "responsible enterprise" can thus mean the exact opposite of what the phrase seems to imply.

Such debasement and perversion of language is now quite common. It is, in fact, one of the roots of the growing confusion of concepts and values of our society.

While not going quite so far as the totalitarians who call one-party dictatorship "people's democracy," we have confused ourselves with such slogans as "co-operative federalism" and "participatory democracy." Now we are treated to "responsible enterprise" which seems to be a label chosen for intensification of Trudeau's old anti-business policy as Dr. Solandt (former chairman of the Science Council of Canada) discerned it back in 1971.

★ ★ ★

In this perspective, "responsible enterprise" sounds like a code name for the key transformation of the whole structure of our society the ideological Trudeaucrats want to complete in the next four years to rule out repetition of their 1972 election scare.

This impression came through quite strongly despite Mr. Gillespie's emphasis on repeated assurances that "this government is sympathetic to the problems of business." It's not easy to make a false note sound right and too much zeal only draws attention to the discordance.

PLO fears an Arab sell-out

By JOSEPH FITCHETT from Beirut

Palestine Liberation Organization leaders, afraid of being sold out by Arab governments, are having second thoughts about their policy of tacit support for step-by-step peace negotiations with Israel.

Fatah, the largest single PLO member, plans a rare general congress as soon as the results are clear of the forthcoming Kissinger bid for another disengagement.

The PLO chairman, Yasser Arafat, disclosed plans here recently to open a dialogue with left-wing Palestinian extremist groups which are boycotting the PLO and demanding a harder political line.

Recognizing that the next disengagement step was never intended to include the Palestinians, the PLO strategists nonetheless feel time is running out and fear that Jordan is being groomed to reclaim the negotiating role conferred on the PLO at the Arab Summit Conference in Rabat. These suspicions are reinforced by Palestinian chagrin over the absence of any diplomatic overtures to the PLO from Washington. Arafat and like-minded moderates, who urged that the Palestinians should demonstrate their flexibility, have nothing to show for their political compromises.

Some tell-tale signs confirm Palestinian fears. Egyptian sources admit that Cairo has sounded out the PLO about teaming up with King Hussein on West Bank talks. Amman officials are confident that President Sadat will cry off four-way ministerial talks on co-ordination with the PLO while Kissinger is present. After saying he "has reason to believe" Washington will recognize the PLO, Sadat mentioned the PLO only once in his recent major Paris statement.

In an effort to forestall a one-sided Egyptian accord, Palestinian leaders have launched a political campaign to warn against an Egyptian sell-out. Nayef Hawatmeh, leader of the Popular Democratic Front, an influential left-wing Palestinian faction, says he has information Egypt is ready to neutralize the Egyptian front to obtain a further Israeli withdrawal — in other words, demobilize Egypt and demobilize the Arab Front by undermining the unified Arab stand adopted by the Rabat summit conference.

In trying to head off any unilateral Egyptian accord at the expense of the Palestinians (and possibly Syria, too), the PLO reinforces the Soviet position, calling for an early resumption of the Geneva talks with Palestinian participation. It is questionable how much support the PLO would retain if it went over to a spoiling role.

More terrorism would be inevitable. Lebanese fear a crisis in Lebanon would be precipitated by the PLO. But the Palestinians' only real stopping power is the amount of pressure they can apply to the oil states which finance Arab politics.

In the current manoeuvring, the precise political objectives of Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, paramount among the oil rulers, remain unclear.

Faisal's support for the PLO was decisive at Rabat. On the other hand, Egypt would hardly dare suggest a Jordanian role without consulting Faisal.

According to Nayef Hawatmeh, Faisal wants to purge the PLO of left-wing influence. Equating Zionism and Communism as twin nemeses threatening Arab and Islamic security, Faisal views a radical reborn Palestine as simply a new problem added to the Israeli issue.

At the same time, Saudi Arabia has no interest in restoring power to the Hashemites, sole rivals to the Sauds' Islamic authority, or legitimizing Jordanian sovereignty in Jerusalem. A small, conservative-minded Palestine would suit Saudi interests better than Hussein's projected United Arab Kingdom.

The CIA spooks in Canada

From The Calgary Herald

The flap is on again — the CIA is in Canada.

Recent "revelations" say the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency is spooking about within the sovereign borders of independent Canada. It is said that one such operated from a corporate office in Calgary. There has been much hand wringing, and much spluttering indignation. There hasn't been any realism, though.

Of course the United States gathers intelligence information about Canada. Probably it has some agents in the country from time to time. It has them everywhere else in the world, so why not in a country that is poised geographically directly above it and which thus poses the theoretical threat to its security in the most fundamental sense of that word? We know perfectly well the Russians spy on us all the time, whether with the cool professionalism of the ring uncovered by the postwar defection of Igor Gouzenko, or by the fumbling amateurishness of George Spencer, the postal clerk, just a few years ago. If the Russians are interested, why shouldn't the Americans be? If both are interested why is it we reserve so special an odium for the United States and just shrug at the Russians?

Of all the questions that perplex Canada today, many of them having to do in important ways with the totality of our economic and cultural relationship with the United States, this is one of the most petty and picayune.

The passing of a duke

Man of many titles

By ANTHONY LEJEUNE from London

Bernard Marmaduke Fitzalan-Howard, 16th Duke of Norfolk and hereditary Earl Marshal of England, died the other day. He was Premier Duke and Premier Earl, and his subsidiary titles echoed like a roll-call of England's past—Earl of Arundel, Earl of Surrey, Earl of Norfolk, Baron Maltravers, Baron Fitzalan, Baron Clun and Baron Oswaldestre; and, through his mother's line, he held the Scottish barony of Herries.

He had no interest at all in personal publicity: but, although they may not have known it, millions of television viewers around the world admired his work. It was his duty, as Hereditary Earl Marshal, to organize England's great occasions of state. He stage-managed Princess Ann's wedding, the investiture of the Prince of Wales, the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill and the coronations both of Queen Elizabeth II and of her father, King George VI. And he did it superbly well.

On the green turf beneath the battlements of his ancestral castle at Arundel, in Sussex, he liked to captain his own cricket team. When he took an English team to Australia, he was asked how the Australians should address him. "Tell them to call me Dukie," he suggested.

He was a great figure in British racing, too. It was by his orders, as the Queen's representative, that "hot-pants" were barred from the royal enclosure at Ascot.

He was not ashamed to look and sound old-fashioned, but a nice dry sense of humor kept peeping out. Was it true, he was asked by a schoolboy at the time of the coronation, that the peers carried sandwiches in their coronets? "Probably," said the Duke. "They are capable of anything."

And when he was asked what would happen if something went wrong on the day, he replied firmly: Something will go wrong on the day. The point is to see that nobody flaps." In fact, however, he was such a skilful impressario that the worst mistake in all those giant ceremonies was that Sir Winston Churchill's funeral (which the Duke had code-named "Operation Hope Not" when he planned it in advance) was running two minutes late as the coffin left St. Paul's Cathedral.

The existence of at least a few aristocrats like the Duke of Norfolk, whose sense of public duty can be absolute because their own positions are totally secure, is necessary to under-pin the monarchy and to sustain the traditional fabric of English life. They are under attack now from the Labor government, not openly, but insidiously through policies of confiscatory taxation designed to break up the old estates.

To attack them openly would not be popular. The English still love a lord: and the monarchy itself, although (or perhaps because) it is treated with less sickly adulation than a few years ago, seems more secure than ever. The popularity, unaffected charm and excellent behavior of Prince Charles augur well for the future.

A book by a Labor member of Parliament, William Hamilton, viciously attacking the monarchy, has just been published. But nobody was shocked, as people would once have been. Still less was anybody persuaded. The book was simply shrugged off as a piece of typical bad manners and ill-founded argument from a man who is known to be a crank on the subject.

Since Watergate, republican views have become even scarcer than usual in Britain. Queens and earl marshals look rather good by comparison, it's felt.

Now there is a 17th Duke of Norfolk, who becomes, in his turn, Hereditary Earl Marshal. This whole antique procedure has been treated in the often cynical British press with the most genial affection, both for the aristocrats themselves and for their role in public life: which might seem paradoxical at a time of Labor rule and enforced egalitarianism—or, on second thoughts, perhaps not.

A report, considered by experts one of the greatest state documents in the English language, was presented to Parliament in London by the Earl of Durham 136 years ago — in 1839.

Durham had been sent to Canada in 1838 as governor-general and lord high commissioner with almost dictatorial powers. His report laid down the principles that led to the union of Upper and Lower Canada and eventually to independence.

1774 — The French and Spanish defeated the English fleet off the Mediterranean port of Toulon.

1869 — Patrick J. Whalen was hanged at Ottawa for the assassination of D'Arcy McGee. It was the last public execution in Canada.

'Scenario' for invasion of desert analyzed as speculation persists

Is United States prepared to fight for oil?

By JOHN GRAHAM, from Washington

In the spring of 1973 before the Yom Kippur War and the oil crisis, Senator William Fulbright said: "Our present policy-makers and policy-influencers may come to the conclusion that military action is required to secure the oil resources of the Middle East."

In January last year (after the embargo and price rise), James Schlesinger, secretary of defence, said that the U.S. might have to use force if the Arabs carried the embargo "too far." This caused an immediate stir in the desert, and Saudi Arabia and Kuwait said that if it happened, they would blow up their oilfields.

For the first eight months of 1974 the U.S. was preoccupied with settling the Israeli-Egyptian disputes and trying to get the oil price lowered. These efforts were partially successful as to actual fighting, total failure on the price. Then in the autumn President Ford warned at the United Nations that countries had traditionally gone to war over such things as vital supplies.

Finally, in an interview a few days ago, Henry Kissinger, the secretary of state, said that there were circumstances, specifically some "actual strangulation" of the industrialized world, which might require the use of force.

That very same week a documentary film was shown on French television of U.S. Marines staging a practice invasion off the coast of Sardinia. Apparently there have been three such landings since October, and they gave some substance to the various hints last year that the Marines were being trained for desert invasion. Vice-Admiral Turner, commander of the Mediterranean fleet, is quoted in the film saying: "We don't want to invade, but we are prepared."

Nobody seems certain what all this adds up to. The conventional explanation is that the Ford-Kissinger-Schlesinger line is to maintain a low but steady rumble of warnings to the oil producing countries not to go "too far," while co-operating gladly with them in other, more material ways — among them foreign investment and multi-billion dollar arms sales to Saudi Arabia and Iran, including some fairly advanced weaponry.

Washington seems to be sending this "signal" to the Arabs: "We don't want to attack you, nor does anyone else, and we certainly have no plans to, but a set of circumstances might arise in our country or in Europe where we really wouldn't have any choice."

Such circumstances, Kissinger's "actual strangulation," would presumably result if factories had to close down all over Europe for lack of fuel, with perhaps 50 million to 100 million people out of work; a situation remote from today's but by no means unimaginable. And Kissinger is undoubtedly correct in this warning: After all, the years of unemployment in Europe in the 1930s were followed by a period of tragic international confusion.

This talk has led to a public debate on the actual details of a hypothetical American invasion of the desert, because of two suspicions: First, that the actual state of affairs of the West is so bad that someone must be planning something, secondly that diplomatic denials such as those made by Kissinger, however reasonable and guarded, must be a signal of some sort, since they did not have to be made.

The debate, now entering its sixth week, is being conducted exclusively by historians, academics, journalists, and former officials of the Pentagon and the White House. It is important to point out that no member of the government has publicly talked about the "scenario" that follows.

Basically, the scenario is that the United States would militarily take over some oil-producing area. Libya has been mentioned — it is supposedly the notional target of the Marine manoeuvres — but the favorite is a 400-mile strip of land on the western shore of the Gulf, from Kuwait to Qatar.

This is the brainchild of Professor Robert Tucker of Johns Hopkins University, and has attracted particular attention since he is a well-known advocate of less American intervention in other countries' affairs. This coastal strip has about 40 per cent of present OPEC production, and also about 40 per cent of the world's proved reserves of crude oil.

★ ★ ★

The objections to such a military take-over are briefly as follows:

● It would be technically difficult, if not impossible, even allowing for Soviet quiescence.

● Even if feasible, it would have to be done by America alone, would be strongly condemned by America's allies, and would totally outrage the developing world.

● It would in any case be unnecessary since the financial and economic troubles that have come in the wake of the oil price rise can be managed by normal means.

● It would be seen as an act of moral bankruptcy, and therefore repudiated by the American people themselves.

● Quite apart from the difficulty of maintaining personal, physical and daily control over such an area far from home bases for, say, 15 years (if the invasion was to have any point at all), it would lead to widespread Arab terrorism throughout the western world.

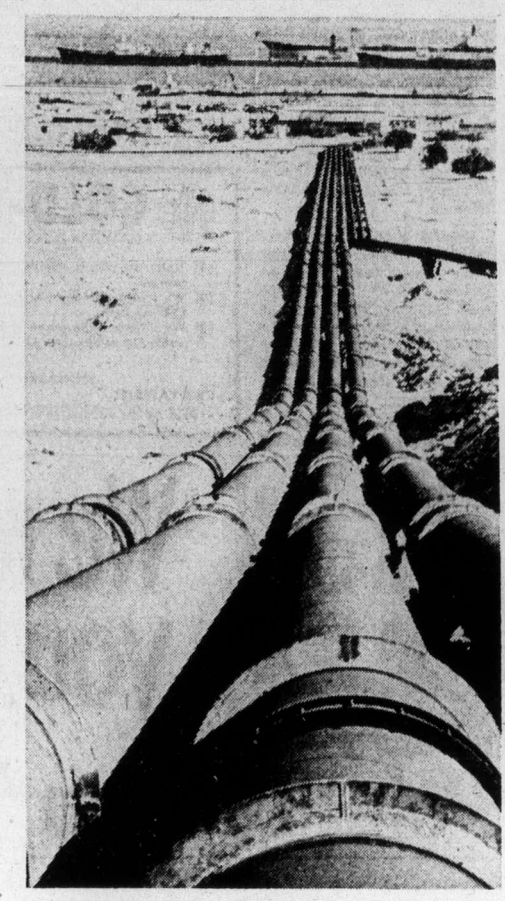

In short, the critics say that one cannot seriously consider a course of action that would be distasteful in any circumstances, and that would prove impossible, self-defeating, unnecessary or utterly debilitating from a moral standpoint.

These objections are answered in these terms:

● The Russians have not recently themselves intervened in the Middle East, have no great capacity there at present, and would not risk a direct clash with an American expeditionary force. And if the United States armed services could not occupy and control a parcel of desert with few towns, no trees, inhabited by unprepared, unarmed, and unorganized Arabs, then what on earth is the Pentagon spending hundreds of billions of dollars a year for?

● Would not the objections of Japan, Britain, Italy, France and Germany be muted by the promise of unlimited cheap crude for many years? The developing world, too, though forced to vilify the Americans as fascists, would presumably accept the vastly greater supplies, at vastly lower cost, of petrochemically-based fertilisers without which their citizens will not only starve but die?

Arabian oil pipelines snake down to port where tankers wait to load.

● There is, at the least, serious doubt that the financial and economic dislocations already in evidence actually can be managed by normal means. Doesn't Kissinger's own grand design for solving the oil problem depend in the end on a lower price?

● If the invasion were seen by Americans, or presented to them, as another Vietnam, it would certainly be repudiated. If it were seen as a legitimate self-defence against fatal extortion, it would swell the numbers at the recruiting stations. And America now has a standing, all-volunteer army. There would be a prerequisite that the operation should be swift and successful, unlike Vietnam, but the merest tyro of a propagandist could get public support for it.

● If the operation could be done at all, then the territory could be held for enough years. During that time a general arrangement might be made between producers and consumers, with sufficient safeguards. Terrorism in various forms is inescapable anyhow — witness the IRA, the Weather Underground in the U.S. Puerto Rican Liberation, Tupamaros. A little more would be regrettable; but this is a nasty world, and better a few innocents die than many millions be deprived of livelihood and prosperity.

It is the latest version of the "hawks versus doves" division. Depending on your outlook of the world, or your specialist knowledge, or your liver condition, you can argue either side.

So far those who oppose such adventurism adduce one other reason, namely that an American invasion would be either accompanied by, or justified by, a pre-emptive strike by Israel against her enemies. Israel would knock out Syria and-or Egypt and-or Jordan, thus giving the Americans a pretext for entering and "stabilizing" the area.

This objection has been most forcibly put by I.F. Stone, the journalist, himself a Jew but one who has long advocated a just solution to the Palestine question, and earned the opposition of some American Jewish groups for his pains.

Such a development, says Stone, would widen the already impossibly-wide gulf between Israelis and their neighbors in the Middle East, and might also threaten Jewish populations in other parts of the world. This is a fear that has been regenerated in many American Jews in the last year.

★ ★ ★

All the current speculation in Washington about an American military invasion of some Middle East oil States has, of course, a long and excellent pedigree. As long as men have talked of the Middle East, they have talked of war. From the Greeks and Romans, through the Franks and Crusaders, and into the two great 20th century wars, the Middle East has been a traditional battle-ground.

Whether the purpose was to establish trade routes, to secure conversion to the true faith, to loot the fabled remains of earlier cultures or, as now, to get enough oil to prevent civil disorder in the streets of Detroit, Dagenham and Dusseldorf, this "middle" area between the populous eastern countries and the populous western countries has been a target.

Has there been a fundamental change in the government's attitudes towards force? In the 1950s, U.S. Marines landed in a rather unimportant Lebanese civil war, and found precious little to do when they got there; they were met on the beaches by Arab children offering them ice-creams. In 1956 it took Anthony Eden only three months to launch a trinational attack on Egypt. In the 1960s the American government thought it of vital importance to intervene militarily in the Dominican Republic.

Vietnam provides the locus classicus for an outside country to use massive military force in what it perceives to be its national interest, or rather in what a small group of people perceive to be its national interest. And there may well be a moral in the failure of all these examples, especially in the most recent and still-wounding Vietnam calamity, which explains the oddity of the present thinking about the Middle East.

This oddity is that without question all serious men in or out of government, in any western country, recognize that the reliable supply of Middle East oil at manageable prices is at the heart of their national interest. And equally, there is an enormous reluctance to take the traditional measures to ensure this supply when it is threatened—measures that have been taken at huge cost over far smaller matters.

Island steel mill idea protested

I am disgusted to hear that Big Brother and his friends are even considering putting a steel mill on the Island.

Even apart from the enormous ecological impact that would be created by such a disaster there are a number of other good reasons against the proposed sites:

● The iron ore must be shipped in.

● There would be the need of a vast limestone quarry near the site — or it would also have to be shipped in, too.

● There is not sufficient electrical power on the Island.

● The finished product would have to bear the additional cost of shipping to the mainland for distribution — unless it is to be all shipped to Japan like every other metal in the province.

● Most important — WE DON'T WANT IT.

And why a Jap company? At least let us make it a Canadian company. Surely the Japanese have amply demonstrated that they don't give a tinker's damn about their own environment, let alone ours.

● There is not sufficient water available.

I agree that a steel mill would be a desirable adjunct to western Canada but let us put it somewhere sensible like Vancouver or Trail where the environment is already fouled up.

Let's keep Canada for the Canadians and no more of the "So solly, pliss? after the damage is done.

Hunter's lecture not appreciated

It must be nice to be someone like Doug Wood, Bow-Hunting Director, B.C. Archery Association, 4709 William Head Road, who is graciously amused by and sympathetic with the views of those who find bow-hunting in Saanich something less than an ideal method of controlling the deer population. It must be a real thrill to Mr. Wood to realize that he has so easily demolished the objections made against his organization's part in the program.

Mr. Wood informs us that our animals in B.C. live in a "predator — prey category." Prey animals, he informs us, are not killed without suffering. Whoever suggested they were? And Mr. Wood might inform us, if he has the wit, why this is an excuse for man to behave like the animals for which he often expresses contempt.

Mr. Wood also (continuing the gratuitous lecture) informs us that man is a predator, somewhat more sophisticated than, presumably, a cougar, since we keep our domesticated prey in pens and cages.

If we slaughter them for food, sometimes without sufficient attention to the efficiency of the operation, is this a reason to allow a bunch of excited nimrods to blunder about in the bush hitting animals in their less vulnerable parts? We are comforted of course by the fact that it "was the Fish and Wildlife in their wisdom" who decreed it all.

Our ancestors, Mr. Wood informs us, were successful bow-hunters or we would not be alive today. He must be talking about the ones who did not drive animals over cliffs or capture fish in weirs or trap animals in pits. Our ancestors also indulged in the slave trade, piracy, genocide, political murder etc., etc., on quite a large scale, but I have yet to read a letter to the Colonist arguing that such behavior is an excuse for similar action now.

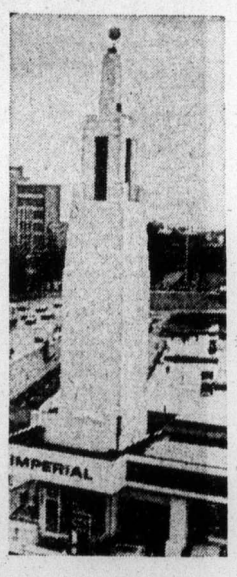

Not many years ago the American Archery Association asked the Parks Branch for a buffalo to kill in the good old fashioned way. After about half an hour (the marksmanship was excellent) the unfortunate beast looked like a pin cushion and a kindly disposed ranger put it out of its misery with a well placed bullet. Later, a white man, trained by Indians, showed how it could be done with one arrow. He was rather exceptional.

Apology offered

I wish to apologize to Mr, Wood, of 4709 William Head Road, director of B.C. Archery Association. The Doug Wood I mentioned in my letter to The Colonist of February 7 turns out to be another Doug Wood. I'm sorry for this mistake in identity.

Causeway disfigured

With the continued beautification of the Causeway waterfront, let us hope for the final eradication of that phallic monstrosity alongside the public lavatories.

Columnist missed

What has happened to Gorde Hunter's column?

I have been a subscriber for more than 30 years and to me his column was one of the highlights of the paper, probably because his forthright and pungent criticisms and opinions expressed those of mine.

I am sure his column is being missed by many readers.

Youth drags young sister from flames

TURTLE CREEK, Pa. — Roger Christie's father battled the heat and the flames, but couldn't rescue 12-year-old Katherine from their burning home. So 15-year-old Roger decided it was up to him to pull his sister to safety.

Ignoring the smoke and flames, Roger ran up to the second floor, carried Katherine from her bedroom to an open window and dropped her into the arms of their father Donald Christie.

She was in satisfactory condition at Braddock General Hospital with burns of the face and abdomen.

None of the other seven members of the Christie family, including Roger, was hurt.

A race to remember

DRUMHELLER, Alta. (CP) — a 108-mile cross-country snowmobile race during the weekend resulted in the death of one contestant, injury to two others and the crash landing of a light plane following the race.

By the end of the race, each of the 56 finishing snowmobiles was damaged in some way, with trouble ranging from broken windshields to engine problems and body damage.

Bradley Roy McKay, 20, of Drumheller, was killed after being thrown from his snowmobile near the start of the race Saturday. RCMP said he was then struck by another snowmobile. Poor visibility and bunching by the racers may have caused the accident.

Near the accident scene, a light plane flying low over the Red Deer River in central Alberta struck a power line and crashed.

The two persons in the plane, both employees of radio station CKRD, Red Dear, escaped injury. An official of the company which owns the plane called their escape "miraculous." The two were covering the progress of the race when the plane crashed on the frozen river.

Later in the race, two contestants were injured when they fell from their vehicles. The worst injury was by a man who suffered a bruised lung.

The race started in temperatures of 32 below with snow from a fresh fall blowing wildly.

Screams were in vain

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Golden Eagle train was gathering speed north of Mexico City on its run to the Texas border when a crowded passenger bus sped toward a railway crossing.

The locomotive blared its horn twice to warn the bus, but the driver chose to race the train to the tracks despite the screams of his terrified passengers.

Seconds later, the train cut the bus in two.

"I never saw anything so horrible," said Ignacio Silva Mecedo, the police chief in the Mexico City suburb of of Cuautitlan.

Police said Sunday that 26 persons died in the crash Saturday night and 32 persons were injured. All the dead were villagers from nearby Tultepec on their way home after a day of shopping in Cuautitlan.

No casualties were reported aboard the train, which continued on its way to Ciudad Juarez, opposite El Paso, Tex., after a brief delay.

Jose Rodriguez Bacre, one of the first to reach the accident scene, reported fragments of the bus scattered 1,500 feet down the track.

"It was horrible to see the dead," he said. "the bodies were all mutilated. The screams of the injured were terrible."

Lucila Chacon, 20, a bus passenger who lived through the crash, said, "I don't know how I survived. All I remember is grabbing the arm of a man sitting next to me.

"Suddenly the train appeared," she said. "The passengers began shouting for the driver to stop and let the train go by. But he paid no attention and instead accelerated."

It was not immediately clear who was driving the bus.

Police identifed the driver as Jose Casimiro Patino, 38, but some survivors said Angel Peralta, 17, was behind the wheel at the time of the accident.

Police and railway officials began an investigation.

Police said at least 58 passengers were jammed into the crowded 40-seat bus at the time of the accident. Buses in Mexico are often overcrowded.

Spunky judge dies at 84

VANCOUVER (CP)—Retired County Court Judge R.A. Sargent, an advocate of the death penalty for murderers and of spankings as a cure for juvenile crime, has died at the age of 84.

Sargent, who stirred up Vancouver a generation ago by favoring legalized gambling and relaxation of Sunday "blue laws," had sat on the bench for 41 years—from 1924 to 1965.

A funeral is scheduled Wednesday for the former chief judge of the county court, who died Saturday.

Sargent in 1948 supported removal of laws against bookmaking and sweepstakes and opposed rigid enforcement of the Lord's Day Act, thereby earning himself criticism by religious leaders.

Following his retirement, Sargent was named by the provincial government to head a royal commission to investigate allegations that the room of labor leaders at a downtown Vancouver hotel had been bugged.

He drew abuse from some labor union members after he sent the president of a union to jail for contempt of the commission.

Fishing strike Sunday?

A possible province-wide strike affecting 800 Vancouver Island fishermen and 300 shore-workers could take place Sunday.

Some 3,000 B.C. herring fishermen, members of United Fishermen and Allied Worker's Union and Native Brotherhood of B.C., have voted 96 per cent to reject an employers' wage offer of $75 a ton to seine crews and $150 to gillnetter crews.

Local 24 of the union (Victoria, Sidney and Sooke branch) voted 62 per cent to reject the offer which, according to Elgin Neish, secretary-treasurer of the local, represents a cut from last year's prices of 43 per cent to the seiners and 40 per cent to the gillnetters.

Rejection of the offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C. means there will be no fishing by 800 Vancouver Island union and brotherhood members when the West Coast roe herring season starts Sunday, unless a new offer is made before then.

According to Neish, this will affect fishermen in Alert Bay, Sointula, Campbell River, Port Alberni, Sidney and others.

While most Island fishermen have boats equipped to catch salmon as well as herring, the herring is an important mainstay in local fishermen's yearly income.

"The major salmon fishing season does not open until April 15," Neish said, adding that many fisherman are eager to get out early to meet their mortgage payments."

Herring fishing opens for gillnetters Sunday in Area 18, off the east coast of Vancouver Island, from north of Duncan to south of Sidney. Other areas open between Feb. 23 and March 15.

The union and brotherhood are asking for a cost-of-living increase of 14.24 per cent above the 1974 prices, which were $131.50 a ton for seine crews and $250 a ton for gillnetter crews.

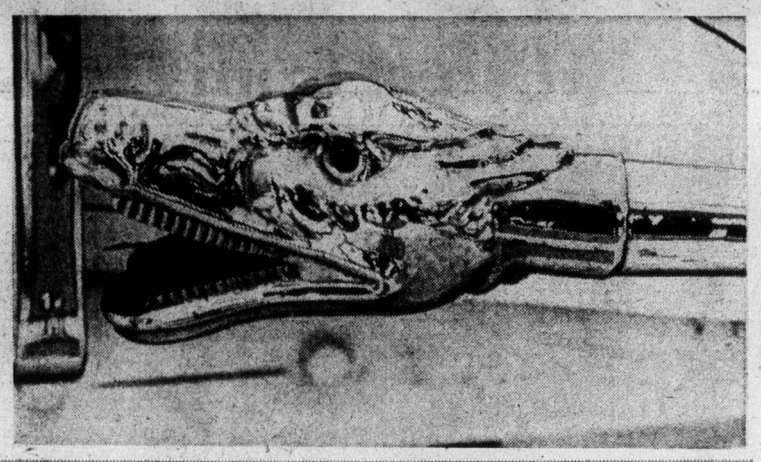

Neish said herring quotas for B.C. fishermen are up 12,000 tons this year to a total of 62,000 and two new herring roe treatment plants have been started in Victoria, yet the fisheries association has offered fishermen half what they received last year in spite of expansion in the industry.

Esquimalt, Sidney CUPE members join picket lines

About 100 workers employed by Esquimalt and Sidney municipalities have joined 1,060 other members of Canadian Union of Public Employees in Greater Victoria on the picket lines after being locked out Monday morning.

Janitors and inside workers employed by the Greater Victoria School Board are the only workers involved with the regional bargaining committee who are still at work. The regional committee negotiates for Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Sidney, the Capital Region, and the board.

Jim Walker, president of CUPE local 50, which walked off the job in the city of Victoria two weeks ago, said the Esquimalt and Sidney lockouts were "expected."

"The employers have just locked out more employees and it looks like they're not prepared to go back to the bargaining table for some time," Walker said.

The Victoria city outside workers are the only CUPE workers who have gone on strike. Workers in other municipalities were locked out as employers made good their threat to meet a strike in any one jurisdiction with an area-wide shutdown.

The CUPE locals involved in negotiations with the regional bargaining group met Sunday and formed a regional bargaining group of their own.

Walker, who chairs the union group, said that "at any time management wishes to approach us, the area bargaining committee is now ready to meet with management and resume bargaining," but the locals will no longer bargain separately.

Walker also criticized the city for operating Memorial Arena for such commercial ventures as Victoria Cougars hockey games. The arena is closed at all other times as a result of the strike.

"Management is operating it for commercial things and the kids are suffering because the city wants to bring in money," Walker said.

Meanwhile, picket lines around Hartland Road dump parted late last week to allow Victoria General Hospital to dump a load of hospital refuse.

Use of the dump is gradually diminishing, according to strikers at the site. Pickets are not blocking traffic — only informing drivers that the picket line is legal.

Non-union employees ready for last resort

Circulating among Esquimalt's seven non-union employees, left to run the municipality after their CUPE workers were locked out Monday, is a list of each of the seven's home phone numbers.

And at the bottom of the list is the number for Dial-A-Prayer.

Minister wonders

Lawyers to give cash discount?

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young is wondering if lawyers will give clients a five per cent discount for paying cash when they start accepting credit cards as payment for legal fees.

Benchers of the B.C. Law Society have approved the credit card proposal in principle and hope details will be worked out in a couple of months.

"Master Charge and Chargex will be making a lot of money, the client will be paying 18 per cent interest on the fee directly, and someone will be paying the five per cent charge levied by the credit card companies on the firms they collect for," she noted.

"It's hard to see how that is going to prevent bad debts, but it will put the onus upon someone else to collect."

Ms. Young suggested that lawyers concerned about a client's ability to pay should allow monthly payments directly to the firm.

Consumers Association of Canada provincial president Ada Brown agreed with Ms. Young.

"I am really concerned about this," she said. "I feel this is probably going to create more problems for the people in need of legal services," Ms. Brown said.

"I would have thought that if the lawyers aren't prepared to carry monthly charges themselves, they would have steered their clients to bank or credit unions where loans are cheaper than by credit card."

Ms. Brown felt that anyone in need of legal services probably had enough problems without being advised to use a credit card to pay the bill.

"However, I guess if one is up against it with a legal problem, one would pay as best one could just to get the advice—and legal fees are prohibitive so that few people would have cash on hand for payment."

Indians won't burn refuse

The Songhees Indian band has backed away from its offer to burn garbage at Maple Bank in Esquimalt.

Chief John Albany said Monday the band had previously planned to set up a garbage burning operation and charge 50 cents a bag to ease disposal problems during the municipal lockout.

But to avoid conflict "with friends in Esquimalt," and disruption of work on Maple Bank Park, the plan has been abandoned, Albany said.

Victorians rise to salute the great Russian cellist

A Review

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

London Promenaders do — but Victoria symphony-goers don't — tend to get off their theatre seats and stand-clap their ovations.

But that's what they did, the over-60s crowd 'n all, Monday night to show their affection for that great impish-looking Russian cellist Mstislav Rostropovich.

The Royal Theatre features the disaster epic The Towering Inferno these days but Sunday and Monday it strummed and danced to the tunes of Antonin Dvorak.

And Rostropovich's rendering of Dvorak's Concerto for Cello and Orchestra dispelled all those worthless-seeming Victoria symphony squabbles like day chases night.

Violinists will disagree but the cello — in the right hands — is the most sensual of instruments.

Cellist Rostropovich in thumb position

It has a gritty sweeping edge that enables performers, like the Russian, to play unashamedly romantically with tense throbbing vibrato — without descending into drivelling sentimentality.

And violinists will have to concur that Rostropovich toying away in thumb position (high up on the cello) is sweeter than most of the most bird-like of violins.

He has such command that no one in the audience would have cared if he'd played a few wrong notes (he didn't) or mucked about with the tuning.

Conductor Laszlo Gati said before Rostropovich's second-half showing that the cellist was "a little tired" and had to catch an early plane and so couldn't stay behind to sign autographs.

But the Russian's autograph in fact was better than a paper-scribbling.

He played a piece of unaccompanied Bach. Then left the stage accompanied by two of the women players in the orchestra.

Dvorak, the son of a village butcher and publican, deserves, of course, a little bit of the credit.

It was after all the cellist performing the cello concerto.

He (Dvorak) showed his village dancing roots in the first half of the concert in the Carnival Overture, crisply played by the orchestra, in the Scherzo Capriccioso (out of fairyland) and three thumping syncopated Slavonic dances.

And he caused the crowded theatre lobby to bubble over with exuberant chitter and chatter during the interval before the small, bald-pated Russian took the stage.

Aldermen cross CUPE line

Esquimalt aldermen on their way to a special council meeting Monday night crossed — without incident — picket lines of CUPE employees council had locked out earlier.

But for the three members of council who are union members, the crossing of another union's picket line posed an ethical and constitutional problem.

Both Ald. Conrad Lundgren, a member of the International Association of Machinists, and Ald. Larry Mann, a member of the B.C. Government Employees Union, got picket passes from CUPE Local 333 before going to the meeting.

But Ald. Art Mebs, a member of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, did not bother to get one because he believes that he serves neither union nor management but the taxpayers as an alderman.

Recycle depot continuing?

The Capital Region Board will reverse its decision to lock-out recycling depot employees, if Saanich Ald. Mel Couvelier has his way.

Couvelier hopes chairman Jim Campbell will reconsider the decision to close the depot when the board meets Wednesday meeting.

The decision "can't be justified under any circumstances," Couvelier said. "It has imposed a ridiculous hardship on the population, when use of the depot should be encouraged.

"I haven't talked to any municipal official yet who doesn't feel strongly that the depot should never have been locked out," Couvelier added.

He said he could see no reason to lock out the depot's many volunteer workers in particular.

Because the depot is on municipal property, the union must be consulted before it can be reopened, Couvelier said.

"The pickets are right on the street on Borden. We would have to persuade them to move the pickets closer to the municipal yard's gates so people won't have to cross a picket line to use the depot," he said.

But he is optimistic the union will co-operate.

The depot has four full-time employees and some part-time employees who are subject to the lockout although they are not union members.

Problems of three Rs touched on by trustees

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

The problems of the Three Rs — or the lack of them — got the once-over-lightly treatment from Saanich school trustees Monday night, with a further installment due at the next meeting.

Trustee Walter Tangye, a school teacher for 14 years, said he is appalled at the lack of reading ability, poor sentence and paragraph construction, and spelling of students.

"I am amazed," he said, "that the area of a circle should be a mystery to many of our students."

But trustee Rubymay Parrott didn't entirely agree with him.

She didn't feel that kids today know less than those of her school days.

"How about the 15-year-old who kept a seat warm in Grade 6 for three years before he was old enough to leave school?" she asked.

She said she recently sat on a committee trying to define a core curriculum.

"It was defined as the study of skills and knowledge authorized by the minister of education to make sure every student becomes functionally literate.

"What," she asked, "does functionally literate mean?"

And, she asked, would the board want every child to have the same set of skills, whether or not they were interested in math or science?

"Are we going to say 'by the time you finish Grade 8, by gosh, you are going to be able to spell?' "

Tangye said remedial courses are needed.

"But in these days of friendly relations between students and teachers, no teacher in his right mind would attempt to teach remedial courses. He would lose popularity."

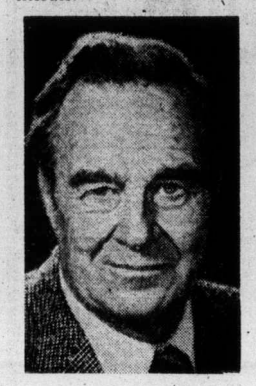

At present, said Tangye, many students cannot even read a simple set of instructions and carry them out.

District superintendent Eric Lewis said there is a need to improve some obvious things, like spelling, some grammar, math and computation.

There is also a need to make time to teach the subjects.

"We talk about more PE, more French, outdoor education, and so very surely we are going to have less time to teach fundamentals."

At this point it was decided to defer discussion until the next board meeting.

Marina-housing plan for Crofton

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

A Victoria land development firm has presented North Cowichan council with preliminary plans for a comprehensive waterfront development in Crofton.

The proposal by Bullock, Guelph and Associates Ltd., called Mariner's Village, includes a marina, shopping centre, hotel, apartment blocks and a residential area.

The 23-acre development, which includes the old Mount Sicker copper smelter, is just south of the Crofton government dock and ferry slip and fronts on Queens Street.

The site consists of open grassland, with a gentle slope to the northeast in the direction of Vesuvius Bay on Salt Spring Island.

The seaward side has been used in past as a tailings dump and is covered to an undetermined depth with fine black tailings.

The other side was the site of the Mount Sicker copper smelter, and is now a jumble of concrete foundations and old trackage.

The developers have requested that Environment Canada do an environmental impact study on the site, especially in the foreshore area where the mine tailings were dumped.

The proposed marina with breakwater, which is on a separate marine lot of four acres, would accommodate an estimated 330 power or sailboats and have the necessary services for the boating public.

A further 35,000 square feet, the developers say, would be available for future developments which might include a yacht club.

The hotel would have 60 rooms and include a beer parlor. The proposed apartment block, with 48 units, would occupy the site of the old smelter with the bottom floor at marina level. More apartment units are planned, but phased development is envisaged.

A minimum of two acres would be provided for the development of a shopping centre. The developers say in their proposal that if the community of Crofton requires more shopping area it could be made available.

The lowest density is planned in the southwest upper end where 33 single housing units would be located.

Toward the lower part, 18 duplexes would be built near the apartment blocks and row housing, which is planned.

Acting Mayor Dennis Hogan was reluctant to comment on the proposal and emphasized that these were only preliminary plans which haven't received council approval as yet. He also said the seven-member advisory planning commission will be studying the development at its meeting this week.

Provincial COURT

Firm action was needed Monday in the case of a 17-year-old in Victoria Provincial Court or, said Judge William Ostler, "the accused will sink further into the narcotics quicksand in which he is almost totally immersed."

Victoria area resident Norman Wayne Hogan, address not known, had pleaded guilty Jan. 27 to a Saanich charge of break-in and theft laid after $75 in cash was taken Jan. 8 from the Mount View Pharmacy, 3892 Carey. He was remanded to Monday for a pre-sentence report.

Ostler said the report showed "an extremely disturbing case" of a 17-year-old committing a crime to support a drug habit that began when he was 13 and had given him a debt load of about $1,000.

The judge said Hogan may not agree but the break-in could be taken as "a cry for help," the firm action he decided on was a five-month term in a forestry camp, followed by 18 months' probation.

□

"There's a complete blank in my memory . . . sometimes I feel that I'm being possessed," Ostler was told by Charles William Karaim, 23, of 660 Cowper, after Karaim pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of dangerous driving and driving while under a licence suspension Feb. 3.

Prosecutor C. W. Vause said police chased Karaim from Donald and Maddock along Donald, Burnside and Irma to a dead end. Karaim took off and was found in bushes at Gorge and Washington.

Karaim said he remembered nothing from the time he was asleep in his bed until police "woke me up in the forest." He said he had since started serving time for impaired driving and had decided to do so because he would then have enough money to pay fines for these offences.

The judge indicated Karaim's bad driving record could have earned a jail sentence but decided on a total fine of $650 plus a one-year driving ban.

□

Prosecutor Bruce McConnan suggested a jail term to be served on weekends for Robert Michael Lekivetz, 19, of 567 Mountfield, and Ostler said he would have ordered it had McConnan insisted.

But the judge felt attendance at a weekend work camp might have a better effect on Lekivetz than jail time would and McConnan said he would go along with that.

Lekivetz pleaded guilty Jan. 6 to a charge of possession of a small amount of narcotics Oct. 22 when police checked him on Douglas near Topaz and admitted two similar previous convictions.

Ostler said Lekivetz "simply refuses to obey the (drugs) law . . . I appreciate he does not agree with the law but that has nothing to do with the case."

He agreed with McConnan that a fine and probation "had not worked in the past" but decided to try both again, with an extra penalty. Lekivetz was fined $500, put on probation for 12 months and ordered to attend a weekend work camp in Metchosin.

David Gavin, 32, of 791 Pandora, was sentenced by Ostler to a total of four months in jail and a two-year driving ban.

Gavin pleaded guilty Jan. 16 to charges of impaired driving May 5 in Victoria, common assault Aug. 24 in Oak Bay, driving while under a licence suspension Nov. 11 and 24 in Victoria and resisting a peace officer during the Nov. 24 incident.

Gavin said drinking caused his lengthy record and he had realized "it has gone just about as far as it can go." He said he had joined Alcoholics Anonymous and "I apologize to the court and the police for all the trouble in the past."

He will also be on 18 months 'probation when his jail time ends and one condition was taking a job in Hope arranged by a community service group.

□

Preliminary hearing dates were set by Ostler in two cases of serious narcotics charges.

Gary Edward Mottle, 18, of 425 Campbell, elected trial by county court judge on a charge of possession of marijuana Feb. 2 in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking. His hearing will take place May 28.

Charles Ernest Menzies, 19, of 949 Menzies, chose trial by county court judge on a charge of possession of MDA for the purpose of trafficking and possession of hashish Feb. 1 in Victoria. His hearing was set for July 7.

CHARANA, Bolivia — The presidents of Bolivia and Chile have announced that their countries will restore diplomatic relations severed 13 years ago because of a river dispute.

Low tender high for building

Lowest of three tenders for construction of an addition to the University of Victoria student union building is nearly double the $500,000 budgeted for the project.

Farmer Construction Ltd. has been asked by university officials to pare its tender bid of $954,968.

Other bids were from Dura Construction Ltd., $962,790, and H. E. Fowler and Sons, $1,480,400.

Construction of the addition — to include a small auditorium, games rooms and offices — was to have begun this spring for completion in about a year. It will be paid for mostly by Students' fees.

Dog dies in duplex

Man saved in blaze

A 27-year-old Victoria man was saved from death but a dog died early Sunday when a $20,000 blaze hit a duplex at 117-119 South Turner.

Victoria police and firemen said inexpensive wall panelling in the basement was too close to smoke pipes and was ignited, sending flames into the main-floor kitchen and on to the upper floor.

Sole occupant Glen Stanford Young apparently tried to escape but became entangled in a stepladder while groping his way out through the smoke. He became unconscious and was rescued by firefighters Rick Mosher and Dale Barber.

Young was recovering Monday in Royal Jubilee Hospital. A dog believed to belong to building owner R.L. Pattison, who was visiting friends, was found dead on the upper floor.

In Saanich, firemen estimated damage at about $2,000 in a fire early Monday which was confined to the rumpus room of the $60,000 home of the D. K. Reed family, 596 Peto Place. No one was hurt and the cause was said to be a foam pillow resting against an electric heater.

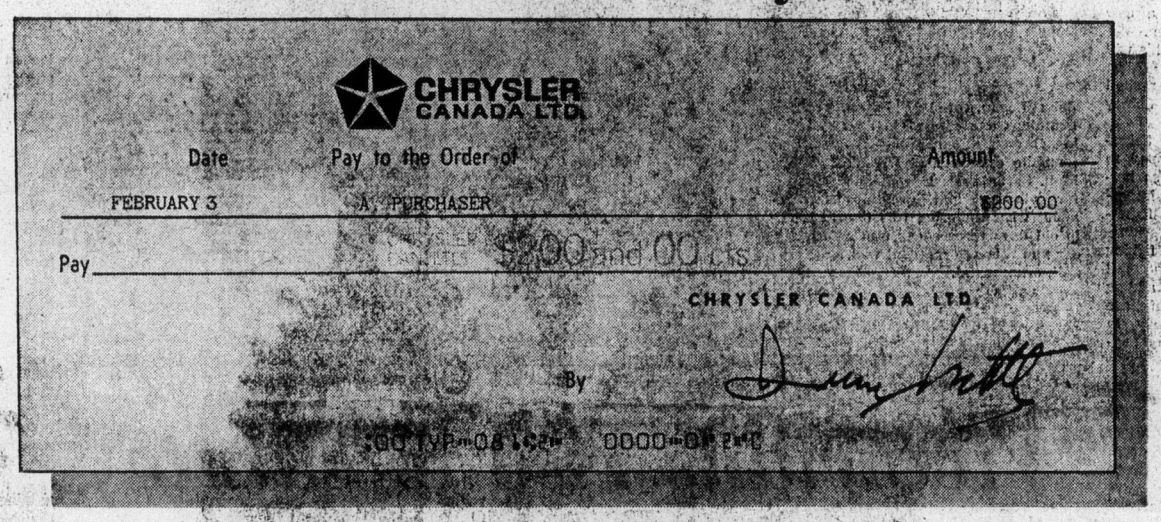

Also in Victoria, no one was hurt and damage was only a few hundred dollars early Sunday when an apartment resident at 1911 Stanley allowed a candle to burn down in a glass candelabra. The candelabra, located on a dresser drawer, broke and items on top of the dresser caught fire.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto stock market drifted to a mixed close Monday with prices fluctuating narrowly in the slowest trading in almost three weeks.

The market had declined sharply Friday following strong gains earlier in the week. Analysts say they expect the market to continue volatile for a while with possible gains prompted by falling interest rates offset by profit-taking.

North Canadian Oils, the most actively-traded issue, was up 20 cents to $4.55. Trading resumed at the open following a halt last Thursday pending news that Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. is considering a takeover bid for North Canadian.

Alberta Gas Trunk said it has not decided on an offer. The class A stock was unchanged at $12½ in Monday's trading.

R. L. Crain, which reported higher 1974 earnings, was up ¾ to $12.

Andres Wines was off ½ to $8⅝. The company reported lower profit for the nine months ended Dec. 31.

World inflation shows decline

PARIS (UPI)—The 1974 inflation rates for 24 of the world's top western industrialized nations were not as bad as expected, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development said Monday.

"As a result of end of the year easing, the outcome for 1974 as a whole in most countries was somewhat more favorable than had been anticipated," said a report of the organization which groups the leading economies in the non-communist world.

An OECD table on consumer prices showed West Germany had the best anti-inflation record, holding last year's increase to 7 per cent compared to 6.9 per cent for 1973.

The United States saw an 11 per cent increase last year, with 6.2 per cent the year before, the figures showed. Canada's rate for the two years were 10.7 and 7.6 per cent.

The only countries besides West Germany to avoid double digit inflation rates last year were Austria (9.5) Luxembourg (9.5), The Netherlands (9.6), Norway (9.4), Sweden (9.9), and Switzerland (9.8).

Iceland had the highest inflation in the OECD area at 42.9 per cent.

"For the first time in over a year, the monthly increase in OECD consumer prices fell below 1 per cent in December," the report said.

Almost all the organization's 24 members saw their inflation rates decelerate at year's end, it said.

"Wholesale prices have been flattening out in most major countries for the past two or three months, reflecting the continued easing of industrial raw materials prices and the stabilization of world market food prices."

Ontario favored to repeat in Winter Games

By MEL SUFRIN

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — The third Canada Winter Games, a co-operative undertaking centred in Lethbridge but involving 14 other communities in southern Alberta, opened today with Ontario once again favored to finish on top in a battle for points with British Columbia, Quebec and Alberta.

About 2,530 young athletes from the 10 provinces and two territories will compete in 16 sports for more than 100 gold medals. A two-hour official opening ceremony featuring Prime Minister Trudeau, Health Minister Lalonde, alberta Premier Lougheed and Mayor Andy Anderson of Lethbridge, is scheduled to start at 5 p.m. PST. Actual competition begins Wednesday and runs until Feb. 22.

The new 400-metre speedskating oval and the adjacent 5000-seat sports facility in the heart of the Games took all but $100,000 of the $4-million capital budget provided for the Games. The federal and Alberta governments each contributed $530,000 and the rest came from the city and people of Lethbridge, a community of 44,000.

Keith Lees, a 46-year-old general manager who sold his credit consultant's business 18 months ago to take charge of planning for the Games, expressed pride in the fact that the 1975 Games are based on a regional concept, unlike the 1967 Games in Quebec City and the 1971 competition in Saskatoon. Noting that such Alberta communities as Taber, Westcastle, Claresholm, Fort Macleod, Picture Butte, Coaldale, Raymond, Standoff, Pincher Creek, Blairmore, Bow Island, Cardston, Magrath and Devon will join Lethbridge in providing facilities, Lees said "Everybody has given us the same kind of support."

More than 4000 persons in Lethbridge alone were involved in preparations, and 1600 students pitched in to set up the athletes' quarters in five school buildings, a job that was completed last Friday in a six-hour blitz.

Lethbridge schools have been closed for the duration of the Games and classrooms have been converted into dormitories.

Sports that make up the Games are hockey, weightlifting, wrestling, volleyball, table tennis, synchronized swimming, speedskating, judo, gymnastics, figure skating, fencing, curling, boxing, badminton, basketball and skiing.

While Ontario is rated the favorite to win the most gold medals and amass the greatest number of points — based on 12 for a first-place finish down to one for a 12th-place ranking — it is all but impossible to predict who will be the individual stars.

That's because members of Canada's national and international teams or those who have national rankings are generally barred from competition here. And age limits are set for most sports, ensuring that the bulk of competitors will be in their teens.

Ontario won the 1971 Games with 253.5 points followed by B.C. with 235, Quebec with 216.5 and Alberta with 203. The 1967 Games also were won by Ontario with 129 points followed by B.C. with 111, Alberta 107 and Quebec 100.

And in the medal rankings in 1971, Ontario had 41 golds, 31 silvers and 21 bronzes, followed by B.C. with 24-15-25. Manitoba 11-7-8, Quebec 10-26-24 and Alberta 8-12-11.

Curling roundup

New champ certain

There'll be a new Canadian police curling champion this year.

Neil Dickson of the Victoria RCMP, who won Canadian honors last year with a totally-different rink, was eliminated Monday in the 11-rink, double-knockout provincial final at New Westminster's Royal City Curling Club.

Dickson started off with easy victories over Ron Wynn of Creston and Ken Jones of Kelowna, then suddenly had things turn around for him. He was knocked out of "A" event by Bob Hawkes of Victoria, who broke a 2-2 tie with four on the sixth end and rolled to a 9-2 win, and then lasted only four ends in his first "B" game, conceding there after Brock Giles of Vancouver had run up a 9-0 lead.

However, Victoria still had two rinks among the five still with a chance. Dick Latta (Ed Mantik, Barry McComb, Ralph Svenson) was in the best position, as the winner of "A" event. The last of his three wins was by 9-6 over Hawkes, who dropped into the semi-finals of "B" event.

Hawkes, who opened with an 8-5 win over Giles, meets Giles again. The "B" semis and final are scheduled this morning, the "B" winner takes on Latta at 2:30 this afternoon, and if Latta should lose, the decider will be played at 4:45.

★ ★ ★

Dick Austin of Victoria opened strongly Monday in defence of the B.C. firefighters curling championship.

Playing in the annual bonspiel, which drew 71 rinks and qualifies the "A" semi-finalists and the "B" winner for a playoff, Austin ended the day 1-0 with an easy 12-4 win over George Evanshen of Burns Lake.

Stan Thame, Gene Knapp and Jim Taylor also got away 1-0, but things didn't turn out too well for the balance of the 11-rink contingent from Victoria. Out of the running for provincial honors because of losing their first two games are Whitey Severson and Al Elphick; Jack O'Connor, Ron Pearce, Les Ruark and Roger Loughney are 0-1, and Jack Northup was 1-1 going into Monday's late draws.

★ ★ ★

A Nanaimo District rink skipped by John Foster will represent Vancouver Island in the provincial boys' high school curling final, Feb. 20-23 at Prince George.

Foster (Dave Elgie, Kevin Malone, Ken Morzocco) made it by scoring two Sunday wins over Steve Williams of Duncan's Cowichan High. The first came in the "B" final of the four-rink double-draw competition. It was by 7-6, and Foster, who had lost in "A" event to Williams, followed that with a 12-8 triumph.

Beutle tops Wood

Frank Beutle of Penticton is one win away from representing B.C. in the Canadian men's curling championship.

The B.C. Curling Association champion went one up in the best-of-three provincial final Monday at Prince Rupert by stopping Vic Wood of Vancouver, 11-6, in the opening game of the best-of-three series. Matches are scheduled today at noon, and 7 p.m. if necessary.

Beutle, who won the BCCA championship on the weekend by defeating Don Seekins of McKenzie, 9-7, broke open Monday's match by counting five on the 10th end to move ahead 11-4. Wood counted two on the 11th end and the teams left the ice without finishing the final end.

Other members of Beutle's rink are Ray Jones, third; Don Wood, second, and Bob Partridge, lead.

Bruin manager fined

SASKATOON (CP) — New Westminster Bruin manager Bill Shinske was given a $300 fine Monday for what was termed a disappointing involvement with game officials after the Friday game in Kamloops, Ed Chynoweth, president of the Western Canada Hockey League, announced. Kamloops defeated the Bruins, 5-4. Shinske apparently became involved verbally and physically with the referee and linesmen as they were making their way to the referees room after the game, said Chynoweth.

England controls sixth test

MELBOURNE (CP) — England took a stranglehold on the sixth cricket test against Australia Monday, smashing 529 runs to hold a first inning lead of 377 over Australia.

Mike Denness hammered 188, Keith Fletchler 146 and Tony Greig 89.

At the close, Australia was 32 for no wicket in the second inning — 345 runs behind.

The last six wickets fell for only 22 runs, enabling Australia's opening bowler, Max Walker, to gain his best ever figures of eight for 143 off a marathon 42 overs.

It took a remarkable catch to dismiss Denness. Walker had to change direction, fling himself sideways and throw out his right hand when Denness punched a short delivery hard back down the pitch. The catch stuck.

LITTLE KICK by Johnny Miller followed a putt which just missed on the final hole of the Bob Hope Classic. Enough of Miller's putts dropped to earn him his third title of the year and another $32,000.

Miller earning spot in 'circle'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—The line of succession can be traced to Harry Vardon.

Then there was the Haig-Walter Hagen — and the immortal Bobby Jones. In a more modern time, there was Ben Hogan and Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus.

All had one thing in common. They stood at the pinnacle of golf. And now they have to make room in their elite circle for another young man.

He's claiming this lucrative game for his very own. He is exerting an influence and a dominance that may be unmatched by even these greatest of golfing names.

He's openly, confidently, challenging Nicklaus for supremacy. The golfing aficionados are beginning to talk of The Miller Era.

When the North American economy teeters on the brink of even worse recession, when there are upheavals, problems and famine around the world, it is Johnny Miller's picture — the picture of that graceful, lashing swing by a tall, slender young blond — that adorns the cover of a major national news magazine.

Miller added the Bob Hope Desert Classic title and $32,000 to his treasure chest Sunday with a final round 68, 21 under par for the unique 90-hole event.

Bob Murphy closed with a 66 but had started too far back and had to settle for the $18,240 second prize with his 342, three behind Miller.

Jerry Heard was another stroke back after a 69 and Tom Shaw, who also carded 69, was fourth at 245.

Palmer, who has won the Hope title five times, never was a factor and finished at 353, while defending-champion Hubert Green was at 355 along with George Knudson of Toronto.

Miller's win was his third of the year, 11th in the last 14th months and the 14th of his five-year career.

City archer sets record

VANCOUVER — Victoria-archer Gerri Cosgrove set a meet record of 538 Sunday in the women's freestyle amateur event at the B.C. indoor archery championships.

George Pierce of Ladysmith won the men's barebow with a score of 528, two ahead of Vancouver-bowmen Joe Plank and Klaus Schultz.

Bridgman and mates tackle Chiefs tonight

Mel Bridgman has been slowed up in recent games but his Victoria Cougar line continues to be the highest-scoring unit in the Western Canada Hockey League.

Points-leader since early in the season, Bridgman managed only three points in three games last week but still leads Bryan Trottier of Lethbridge Broncos by nine in the individual scoring race. The big Cougar centre counts a team record-equalling 47 goals in his 113 points.

Bridgman, held pointless in a 5-4 loss to New Westminster Bruins on Sunday in the Royal City, will attempt to add to his total tonight when Kamloops Chiefs visit Memorial Arena for an 8 p.m. game.

While Bridgman has been held in check, rightwinger Danny Lucas keeps piling up the points. The husky 16-year-old scored his 44th and 45th goals of the season on Sunday and now has the third-best goals total in the league, behind only Don Murdoch of Medicine Hat Tigers, with 60, and Bridgman.

Lucas is tied for fifth place in the scoring with Don Ashby of Calgary Centennials at 87 points.

And leftwinger Peter Morris, who snapped a mild slump with a pair of goals and three assists in weekend games with the Bruins, holds down eighth place with 84 points.

Morris opened the scoring for Victoria at Queen's Park Arena and assisted on Lucas' second scoring shot, which pulled the Cats into a 3-3 tie early in the third period.

Former-Bruin Eric Sanderson put Victoria ahead moments later but the Bruins rallied and earned only their second win in eight games with Victoria this season. Cougars won four and tied the other two games.

Cougars maintained their nine-point edge on Medicine Hat in the Western Division when the Tigers split a pair of weekend games.

After losing to Brandon Wheat Kings on Saturday, the Tigers stopped the Broncos, 3-1, before 5236 fans in Lethbridge on Sunday.

In other Sunday action, Edmonton Oil Kings remained six points behind the fourth-place Bruins by downing Regina Pats, 4-1, Brandon and Calgary fought to a 3-3 tie; and Saskatoon Blades romped to a 9-1 win over Flin Flon Bombers.

Burrows slightly fantastic

Bob Burrows turned in an incredible weekend performance to lift Victoria Scorpions to the best-of-five playoff final (and B.C. championship) of the Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Basketball League.

The former coach of the league-champion Scorpions, who decided to concentrate on playing this season and leave the coaching to Howie Tooby, rifled in 46 points Saturday in a 111-99 victory over Burnaby-New Westminster Broncos. He fired 37 more Sunday at Mt. Douglas High School to help Scorpions to a 121-109 decision in the final of their best-of-three semi-final series.

Scorpions will face Canadian-champion Vancouver Capilanos in the dual-purpose series slated to start at 8 p.m. Saturday at Central Junior High School. Capilanos took their semi-final series against Richmond Ramblers in two straight games.

While Burrows did most of the scoring, three other B.C. all-stars from Oak Bay High School who won most-valuable-player selections were important factors in the victory. Dave Morgan (1968) scored 25 points. Brian MacKenzie (1966) added 15 and Tom Holmes (1969) contributed 14 to the deciding win.

Defensively, burly Chris Hall, another former Bay, was outstanding for Scorpions holding high-scoring Derek Sankey to 24 points and a weekend total of 41. Sankey had 32 points in Broncos' opening 103-102 triumph in Vancouver.

Burrows, who won MVP honors in 1965 when he helped the Bays to their first provincal championship, also contributed mightily to the final win by hauling down 16 rebounds.

Second game of the series against Capilano will also be held at Central, starting at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Games Three and, if needed, four are scheduled for the Mainland and a fifth game, if necessary, will be held in Victoria.

Winner of the provincial title will advance to the Canadian championship in Winnipeg next month.

Rivals show no mercy on Capitals

Like all expansion clubs, Washington Capitals are forced to skate, shoot and score goals before they have learned to walk. They now are experiencing the growing pains of a first-year National Hockey League club, which means they aren't growing fast enough.

"It's frustrating and depressing to say the least," says Doug Mohns, the Capitals' veteran defenceman and captain. "But you can't develop a defeatist attitude. You can't think about the games behind you, you have to think about the games ahead."

If the Capitals' future games resemble their past ones, than a lack of any thought at all might be best.

With two-thirds of the National Hockey League season over, the Capitals are on the verge of making some negative history. After losing 7-3 to New York Rangers Sunday night, they have dropped their first 28 games on the road, which is a continuing NHL record for futility.

Washington coach Jimmy Anderson says the closest they came to a point on the road "was in Chicago when we led 2-0, but we lost 3-2 late in the game."

In 54 games, the Capitals have won four and tied five and appear headed for the most losses, fewest victories and fewest points of any team in a single season.

Anderson says the new playoff format has made it even more difficult for his club to catch an opponent on an off night.

"All the games are important now," he says. "The other clubs are fighting to get into the playoffs or stay in first place. They're just not letting up."

Prior shatters tenpin records

Bill Prior bowled the highest three-game tenpin series of his life Sunday, helping him to two records and three titles in the 35th annual Victoria city men's championships at Mayfair Lanes.

The former professional baseball pitcher had strings of seven strikes in each of his first two games for 245 and 256 and had a slow start before settling for 190 in his final game for a 691 series in the singles event. That score and his handicap score of 757 are both new records for the tournament and his 1757-198—1955 in the handicap all-events was also a winning score. He had 534 the previous weekend in the team event and rolled a 532 in the doubles event which preceded the singles.

Ken Grexton, who had 632 in the team event and 613 in the doubles, slipped to 530 in the singles but still took the scratch all-events title with 1775.

Winners of the handicap doubles were Gary Young and Ken Fuller with a 1331 total, 27 pins more than runners-up Mike Antrobus and Doug Regimbal.

Badminton mostly formful

Only one minor upset marked Sunday's Vancouver-dominated finals of the annual Vancouver Island Open badminton championships at Cordova Bay Community Club.

Second-seeded Mike Epstein of Vancouver downed top-seed Bruce Rollick, 15-6, 15-3, to take the men's singles title.

However, Rollick teamed with Rolf Patterson for a 15-6, 15-3 win over Geoff Harris of Courtenay and Greg Harris of Vancouver in the men's doubles final.

Patterson was a double winner, partnering Mimi Nillsson to a 12-15, 15-4, 17-16 triumph over Bruce and Judi Rollick in the exciting mixed final.

Jane Youngberg was also a double winner, defeating Sandra Stevenson, 11-6, 11-3, in the women's singles and combining with the losing finalist for a 15-9, 14-17, 15-4 victory over Mrs. Rollick and Mrs. Nillson in the women's doubles final.

Shoemaker up on winner

ARCADIA, Calif. — Stardust Mel, with Bill Shoemaker riding, outdueled Century's Envoy on the turn for the home and came on Sunday to win the $131,300 Charles H. Strub Stakes for four-year-olds at Santa Anita.

Shoemaker, winning his third race of the miserable afternoon and second feature in as many days, kept Stardust Mel with the leaders in the early going and sent him ahead turning off the backstretch with Century's Envoy and Jerry Lambert matching pace for pace.

Turning for home, Shoemaker sent Stardust Mel way ahead and Confederate Yankee, a 25-1 shot ridden by Sandy Hawley, made his bid, but with little chance of catching the pacesetter.

Buy car in Vancouver, check into hotel and come back with money to jingle

On luxury Chrysler, you can save up to $637

Second of a series

By STEPHEN BREWER
Colonist Reporter

New car time and the decision has been made to move up to the "luxury line" marketed by the Chrysler Corporation?

Even seekers of the luxury Chrysler offers can appreciate a saving of between $360 and $637 . . .which is exactly what they can pocket by buying their new car in Vancouver.

Because Chrysler is a luxlry line, its prices are high compared with some other makes.

But, for the same reason, Chrysler owners get many standard features which are listed as options on those other makes: Radial-ply tires, disc brakes, power equipment and, on some models, even the radio are included for the basic price of the car.

In 1975, Chrysler buyers also get an improved warranty package, which includes, at most dealerships, a free rental car if warranty work cannot be performed between morning and evening of the same working day.

All prices quoted in this story were obtained from the dealerships named, where salesmen were asked to provide the cost of the "basic unit" for each model: Cost of the standard auto (without options) plus freight charges and dealer preparation charges, if any.

For convenience, the prices quoted by the two Victoria dealerships which sell Chryslers — Ensign Chrysler-Plymouth, 1061 Yates, and National Motors, 819 Yates — have been averaged to give a "Victoria price," since there is only a maximum of $19 separating the two dealer's prices.

Two of the Vancouver-area dealerships — Langley's Keith Beadle Plymouth-Chrysler-Dodge and Vancouver's Lawson-Oates — quoted identical prices for all four Chrysler models.

The other, Vancouver's Johnston Motors, quoted prices considerably higher than the Beadle-Lawson duo, prices which were in two cases actually higher than the Victoria price.

If you've decided on a Chrysler Imperial, the money you'll save in Vancouver will not only pay your way over and back, but will leave you with enough cash to put yourself and a companion up for the weekend at the Bayshore, with all the trimmings.

Beadle and Lawson-Oates want $10,351 for the basic package, an asking price $643 lower than the Victoria price ($10,994).

Johnston wants $10,856, which is still a saving, but represents a difference of only $138.

Actually, if you're going shopping at either Beadle or Lawson-Oates, the same week-end-for-two at the Bayshore savings are available no matter what kind of Chrysler you're interested in.

On a 1975 New Yorker, for example, the saving amounts to $370 over the Victoria price ($7,890).

Both Vancouver dealers will sell the car for $7,520, while Johnston wants $7,925, or $35 more than you'll pay in Victoria.

For the new Cordoba — billed as Chrysler's mid-range luxury car — saving in Vancouver - Langley amounts to $544 over the Victoria price of $6,494.

Beadle and Lawson-Oates are asking $5,950 for the car.

Johnston wants $6,250, a full $244 more than the Victoria asking price.

If a Chrysler Newport is the car you're dreaming of owning in 1975, the trip across the Strait of Georgia will save you $468, with Beadle and Lawson-Oates willing to let you have the car for a mere $5,702.

Victoria price: $6,170.

Johnston wants $6,172.

Next: How to save between $37 and $272 when you buy a new Plymouth.

The prices are for standard model autos and do not include the "extras" (options such as radios, bigger engines or, on some models, carpets) or the cost of licensing and insuring the vehicles.

There are, of course, many other variables, including trade-in values, which will affect the street price. These variables are subject to negotiation on each individual sale.

The series is intended to serve as an indicator of the asking price of each model, before options are added and negotiations begin.

Prices were obtained from representatives of the new car sales staff at each dealership mentioned, in a telephone survey in late January and early February.

It costs a Victoria car dealer between $40 and $75 to move a new car from Vancouver to his lot.

It can cost a Victoria car buyer much more than that for the convenience of buying that car on Vancouver Island, instead of on the Lower Mainland.

Not for every new car, of course. Some Victoria dealers offer some cars for less than their Vancouver counterparts.

One dealer asks essentially the same price.

Most want more.

A current Colonist series of 10 articles is designed to show which is which.

It does not offer street prices for cars, what it will cost to put a car on the road.

Hospital officials refuse invitation to meeting

Maternity care 'big secret'

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

Capital Regional Hospital board representatives are more close-mouthed than the Secret Service, but far less interested in getting information.

This is the opinion of Status of Women Action Group spokesman Dianne Grimmer who has spent several frustrating weeks trying to find out what plans are being made for maternity care in city hospitals.

But, she says, the board is going to hear from the consumer, whether it wants to or not, and the group is planning a public meeting in the Newcombe Auditorium, Provincial Museum, at 8 tonight to discuss the future of maternity care in the district.

"We hear that the plan is to centralize maternity care in one city hospital, but we can't get details, and in particular we can't find out if we shall be going back to that dehumanized service we used to get, or if there will be a continuation of the family-centred care being given at Victoria General Hospital."

There will be a panel of speakers at the meeting, including new parents and representatives of the medical profession, but, said Ms. Grimmer, neither hospital board chairman Art Young nor health planning commission chairman Dr. Robert Wallace will be there.

"We tried by letters and by telephone calls to get them out, but they refuse to come to the meeting."

In fact the district has been putting all possible obstructions n the way of the meeting, said Ms. Grimmer.

"I asked for copies of two reports to read before our meeting so we will know what has been done.

"They did not say they were confidential reports, but said I must submit a request for the document in writing, giving my reason for asking.

"I thought it unusual, but I did submit the request, and was denied the reports — I don't know why, but I did think the board was a public agency, responsible to citizens."

Grimmer
. . . frustrating

She said Wallace, in turning down her invitation to the meeting, said he did not think he would be able to make a useful contribution.

"Of all people he could make the most useful contribution, even if he only came to listen and find out what kind of care parents want in the maternty wards."

At any rate there will be a meeting, and the opinions of those at the meetng will be presented to the planning comm,ission.

"When they are planning land use they insist upon hearing from the public, why can't we have a say in the planning of hospitals? After all, we're the people who will be using them," said Ms. Grimmer.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: I want to rebut your statement to a woman who wrote and asked whether or not she should have an abortion. You stated your position on abortion, but added, "If abortion is against your religion, or if you feel in your heart that it is murder, I urge you NOT to do it. The guilt might cause you a lifetime of agony."

I am enclosing a magazine article entitled, Abortion: No Lasting Emotional Scars. It deals with a book written by an obstetrician and a psychologist and states clearly that an abortion rarely damages a woman's emotional health. In fact, the opposite is true. If often brings improvement.

The article also cites facts and figures from other experts. They report "seventy per cent of the women said they were very happy about their abortions. Only three per cent said they were sad." These are extremely good odds no matter what the kooks who write to you say.

I know this letter will go into the wastebasket because you don't like to be challenged by people who have the facts and figures. — One Of The 70 Per Cent.

Dear One: Figures lie and liars figure. I don't believe that only three per cent are sad. I stand by my original statement: If abortion is against your religion, or if you feel you are killing a live child, do NOT risk a lifetime of guilt by choosing this solution to your "problem."

Dear Ann Landers: I must comment on the letter from "Bothered and Bewildered" because her daughter Nancy is identical to ours, only we had an added problem — drugs.

My husband and I went through hell trying to get that girl straightened out. Nothing worked. Finally, my sister, who lives 350 miles away, asked if she could take our daughter "for a while." My misgivings were the same as Nancy's parents', but out of sheer desperation, we said yes.

Within three months there was a tremendous change in that child—a complete turnaround on her behavior and attitude. We visited her last weekend and were amazed.

Please tell "Bothered" two things: (1) She hasn't lost a daughter. Nancy will be back. (2) The pressure removed from the parents is an absolute blessing. Separation gives both parents and child a completely different perspective. It turns out that my sister was a lot stronger than I thought. — L.A. Mother.

Dear Mother: Thanks for your supportive letter. I got plenty of heat for suggesting that Nancy be housed "elsewhere." Some "experts" called it "rejection," others called it "abandonment."

Sometimes parents and children need a rest from each other and a change of scenery can work wonders.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for "Harem" — the mother of three daughters.

When I gave birth to my fourth girl baby, I went into a depression. Although my husband never said so, I felt sure he wanted a boy.

A friend sent a note to the hospital which read, "God must have known how much you loved little girls to send you four."

Whenever I wonder what life would have been like if we had had a son, I remember those words and fell warm all over. — Content In K.C.

Dear K.C.: How nice! There were four girls in our family and my mother always said she wished she had had four more.

Dear Ann Landers: There is this neat girl I've known for quite a while. She is cool, with it, and has lots of friends. Everyone enjoys having her around. She's the kind your mother would love. The problem:

Her grammar is something you have to hear to believe. This chick is a high school sophomore yet she says things like, "Me and him went skating," or, "We was walking arm in arm." This afternoon she was showing me two poems she had written and asked if I would tell her "which is worser?"

Is there any hope for this girl? What can be done to get her to speak decent English? How did she get to be a high school sophomore when she couldn't pass a fourth-grade English grammar test? Please answer these questions. I'd like to help her. — Embarrassed Friend

Dear Friend: I'd like an answer to that last question myself. I receive letters every day from high school students whose grammar (and spelling) is out of this world.

The only solution for your friend is to get private tutoring, work like a dog, and keep at it until she is able to overcome her deeply ingrained speech habits. I hope she is willing to do it.

Sydney Carroll: Peripheral vision normal, but she has no central vision

'Blindness is just a nuisance'

By DON GAIN
Colonist Reporter

To see Sydney Carroll running about her attractive Spanish-style house in Broadmead you wouldn't believe she's practically blind.

"A lot of people I know don't know I'm blind," she said in an interview Friday.

"I bluff my way around," she said with a chuckle. "That's fine but I thought it was time I let people know just in case it might help somebody else who is blind."

As she walked through the house to her living room, she was followed by her two toy poodles, Jean-Louis and Juliette-Louise, capering at her feet.

She stooped to pick up the two black bundles of activity.

"Aren't they lovely?" she asked. "I'm very fond of them. Jean-Louis is the great-grandson of Field Stream Bojangles, the first toy poodle to win best in show at Madison Square Garden."

Sitting down in her living room without a misstep, she talked about her blindness.

"I don't want anybody to feel sorry for Sydney Carroll," she said, "because she doesn't. It's a nuisance but that's all."

Sydney Carroll and her husband, Harry Briggs, a writer and economist, have made their home in Saanich for about a year.

They chose Victoria when they became disillusioned with happenings in the U.S. and because Sydney had attended St. Ann's Academy as a girl and liked the Island.

Her husband is an American but she was born and brought up in Penticton. Behind her is a career as a soprano during which she performed leading roles in California in The King and I, Song of Norway, Carnival and Rosalinda.

She was soloist with the Valley Symphony in Van Nuys, Calif., and has given recitals in the U.S., Canada and Europe.

But her heart is in her home where she can arrange things in such a way that she can run about as if she had no visual handicap.

She enjoyed training with John Goss in London and Maestro Genarro Curci and Joseph Klein in Hollywood but, things being the way they are, she can manage her life in a neat and orderly way by staying home and being a housewife.

"I take pride in my house," she said. "I don't agree with people who denigrate the housewife. Keeping house is an art."

She does her own cleaning, dusting, vacumning and washing and she can go to a china cabinet and remove fragile teacups as if her sight were perfect.

She's a gourmet cook and the special thick lens she needs to read her recipes doesn't keep her from enjoying that hobby.

"It's too laborious to read books with the lens," she said, "but I get talking books from the CNIB and they are one of my greatest pleasures."

She sings every day and walks her poodles when the weather is good. She still continues to practice the yoga exercises she learned 14 years ago.

"It helps me to be calm," she said, "and also is good for my breathing."

Her condition is caused by macular degeneration, she said, a rare hereditary malfunction which has left her with normal peripheral vision but no central vision.

Her father, his mother and his brother were afflicted with it. She knew at age 12 that something was wrong but it was dianosed as short-sightedness and astigmatism.

It did not prevent her from completing high school and studying singing but in her late 20s she knew it would change her life.

"However, I'll never be totally blind," she said, "and I've learned to live with my condition."

She has a lot of good things to say about CNIB. Her father, J. C. Hembling, was field secretary for the agency in the Okanagan and the Kootenays for years.

"The service here in Victoria is excellent," she said, "with their talking books, their volunteers and with these," she said, indicating three aids for the blind.

One was a templet to guide a blind person's pen thus making it possible to write a letter. Another was a signature guide, another raised numbers to assist in dialing a phone.

"They're little things but they make life a little easier. I can't look directly at things and see them."

Seeing her standing at the door to say goodbye, it was still hard to believe she had a sight handicap.

"I've hesitated before about talking about it," she said, "but I thought it might help other people if they knew how it was for me. Life is really a wonderful adventure for me and I'd like people to know that those who are blind are not all that different from others."

They live for carnival come hell or recession

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Despite recession, inflation, unemployment and a prolonged bus strike, New Orleans uncorks it annual Mardi Gras extravaganza today.

Because of the money pinch, there may be less glitter and sparkle to the traditionally elaborate and sometimes outrageous costumes. But the childlike spirit that is the essence of the celebration will be undiminished.

"People do without all year long to save up so they can go and have their good time," says Jules Greenberg, a major costume designer here. "They live for carnival. It gets in their blood and stays there."

Mardi Gras or Fat Tuesday, a day on which Christians of years past feasted and partied before the solemn season of Lent, prevades the city from sunrise to midnight.

Masked and costumed revellers depicting kings, clowns, cowboys, gorillas, harem girls and just about anything imaginable roam Bourbon Street and Jackson Square. They drink an enormous amount of wine, beer and liquor.

Some costumes are downright vulgar and obscene, old, fat men dressed in skimpy leotards, young women in revealing dresses.

Thousands line parade routes and jostle for aluminum doubloons and cheap beads and trinkets.

Officials have been reluctant to predict either the size of this year's tourist crowd or the effect of the national economic slump on the celebration. They did say vacancies were available at downtown hotels near parade routes and in the French Quarter.

"It's not a total sellout, nor is it a disaster," said Rick Meyers of the Greater New Orleans Tourist Commission. "Mardi Gras looks to be just as good as ever, but the more proof is afterwards."

There will be fewer facilities for the hippie crowds. Tulane University will not let them board in Sugar Bowl Stadium as in the past.

And visitors will find it harder to travel around town because of the citywide bus drivers' strike, now more than 50 days old and with no end in sight.

Canada gives aid for fish

KUALA LUMPUR (AP)— The Institute for Development Research of Canada has granted aid totalling nearly $600,000 to the Malaysian Agriculture Research Development Institute for research into freshwater fish-rearing and tapioca cultivation.

erma bombeck

Elvis Presley has just endeared himself to me by disappearing on his 40th birthday and refusing to come out until he gets it all together.

I was in seclusion for a year and a half before I felt I could adjust to the condition.

No one, unless they've been there, can appreciate the physical and emotional traumas of reaching 40. Your body reacts like a steam iron on the last day of warranty. It dies on you.

As the second hand swept around on that grim day in February, signifying my birth, my eyes went. I couldn't read the sale tags on dresses or menus unless they fell on the floor. And one day I cooked an 11-pound turkey for six hours when I should have cooked a six-dollar turkey for 11 hours.

Two hours later the teeth went. Fillings that had served me for years fell out while I was eating pudding. I became a "standing" at the dentist.

The body? I could have sued it for non-support and won. Muscles that had been with me for life either fell or shifted.

I became a lumpy bundle of defensiveness. One afternoon, I was under the dryer in the beauty shop leafing through one of those magazines where the models look at you like they've just taken a harsh laxative, when I saw a headline, "DON'Ts FOR AFTER 40." It said, "Don't wear pink eyeshadow. Don't wear red lipstick or nail polish. Don't wear bright, diagonal patterns. Don't wear open-toed shoes." the list must have been a page long.

Out loud I snarled, "Do you mind if I chew gum?"

Then I remembered I had just been to the dentist and couldn't chew on that side.

A woman sitting next to me, looked over at the article and smiled, "Remember, dear, you are only as old as you feel."

I almost smacked her across the mouth with my Medicare application.

Everyone comes to grips with age 40 in his or her own private way. Some people develop a holding pattern at age 37 until they can handle it. Some are resentful and make obscene phone calls to the Osmond Brothers. Others accept it for what it is, a punishment from God for not tithing to the church.

I rather like the Elvis Presley approach to 40. Just go to your room, refuse to answer the door, wallow in self-pity, and pray for a miracle drug to cure it.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

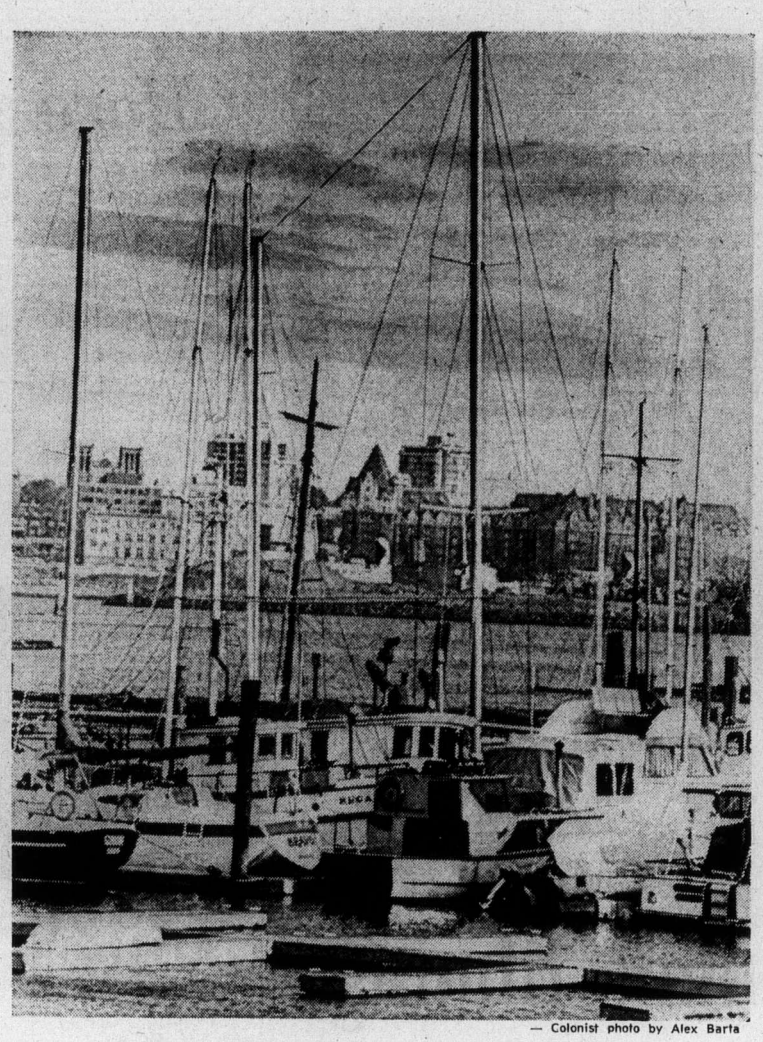

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Scene's almost the same

Despite gusts of wind that assault Victorians these days, camera's eye picks up view of downtown skyline from Esquimalt's West Bay Marina which isn't so different from summertime scene. Maybe clouds indicate precipitation in some form, but who's afraid of a little snow? It wouldn't last.

Eight boys back in juvenile home

All eight boys who staged the largest breakout in the 30-year history of the Victoria Juvenile Detention Home, 1125 Pembroke, were reported by police to be back in custody Monday.

The eight were reported missing at about 9 p.m. Saturday after a sudden illness suffered by another occupant of the home distracted the night supervisor for a short time. While he was busy, a window of a main common room was broken for an escape route.

Two boys were picked up 90 minutes later in downtown Victoria, four more were apprehended Sunday in Duncan and the last two the same day in Nanaimo. Police said all were picked up without incident.

A number of charges of escaping or being unlawfully at large were expected.

Robbery threat wasn't a joke

A 17-year-old Victoria store clerk, who thought a statement that "I'm going to rob you" was a joke, soon learned there was nothing funny about a $295 holdup Sunday night.

Victoria police said Monday a young man went into Mac's Convenience Store, 265 Menzies, at about 8:15 p.m. Sunday and waited until no one was in the store except himself and clerk Roger Schlag.

He then walked up to Schlag and said, "I'm going to rob you." The young clerk thought it was a joke until the intruder took out a long knife and brandished it at him.

The holdup man walked around the counter and told Schlag, "Put the money in a bag for me." Schlag didn't want to do it and opened the till, then stepped back.

The knife wielder brushed past him with a threat to kill Schlag if he moved too quickly, then took $295 from the till and ran out the door.

B.C. names staff to travel offices

Two staff appointments in the provincial travel industry department have been announced by Ernest Hall, the minister.

Pat Crofton, formerly with conventions and contributing grants, becomes new representative in British Columbia House, London, succeeding Rod Fraser who switched to the Canadian government office of tourism.

Crofton was born and educated on Salt Spring Island, and moved to Victoria when he entered the motel business as owner-manager of a resort. He served overseas during the Second World War, and for a year was a United Nations military observer in Kashmir.

A newcomer to the department, James Willis, succeeds Vic Downard as representative in the Los Angeles office. A Scot who emigrated to Canada in 1956, Willis has been on sales staffs of airlines and with travel agencies.

Misty follows Marilyn

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The blonde 20-year-old has the same fragile vulnerability about her that was part of Marilyn Monroe 25 years ago, and she has the identical dream — stardom.

She sat self-consciously in a booth at the Brown Derby the other day in a white satin outfit with plunging neckline. Other patrons stared at her.

The slender girl with the not-quite straight teeth is Misty Rowe, chosen by producer Larry Buchanan to star in Goodbye Norma Jean. The movie is a biography of Marilyn from age 15-20.

Misty is a sweet girl. Her voice, breathy and slight, is dimly reminiscent of Marilyn. But she lacks the late great star's animal magnetism, her mind-blowing femaleness. Misty's body doesn't have the same visceral impact.

Yet Misty (that's her real name) is travelling the same path Marilyn trod. Marilyn and a thousand thousand other young hopefuls. It is a sad, dreary trek to watch. But Misty, like all the others, is bright-faced and hopeful.

The daughter of a mechanic from the small Los Angeles suburb of Glendora, Misty is as hungry for stardom as was Marilyn. The 60-mile trip from Glendora to Hollywood stardom is as difficult and heart-breaking, as if she had started from Bangor, Maine.

Misty's story is at once familiar and poignant.

"I lived off and on at the Hollywood Studio Club for a year and a half," she said, "only two doors from Marilyn's room when she lived there.

"I would work as a telephone operator or waitress in Glendora until I had enough money to stay at the club for a few months. Then I'd take acting lessons and go to interviews. When my money ran out I'd go back to Glendora.

"I entered all the beauty contests I could just for the prize money. I won more than 20 contests — on weekends — to finance my lessons."

Misty was Miss Miniskirt of 1970, along with Miss Radiant Radish. She won $1,500 for becoming Miss Wahine Bikini. The closest she came to the bigtime was the Miss Los Angeles County contest that leads to Miss America.

"I lost that one," she recalled with a faint smile. "I lost quite a few contests but it didn't bother me because I knew there would be another the next week."

Saddlesores follow filming

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Candy Bergen and Gene Hackman are recovering from saddle sores after spending months on horseback for their new movie, Bite the Bullet.

Director Richard Brooks is responsible for their suffering. He forced them to practise riding for five weeks before shooting began on the picture.

Brooks hopes to capture the real flavor of the old west in the story of a 700-mile horse race.

The director is also an amateur psychologist. He knows he can't simply set his cameras down and get the feeling of the panoramic west. He wants audiences to sense the beef jerky toughness of people who populated it.

"I insisted all my actors look and behave the way the old-timers did," said Brooks. "I ran across Hackman right here on the lot and realized he had exactly the kind of face I wanted for the picture.

"And, thand God, Candy is one of the best horsewomen in Hollywood. That's the reason I hired her."

Brooks would have made good casting himself. He is lean and tough. His skin bears the stamp of the elements.

"Hackman is an ex-farmboy and no stranger to horses," he said. "Jim Coburn is a coaster and knows a lot about riding from all the westerns he's made. Best of all is Ben Johnson. He brought his own horse along."

Brooks took his cast and 21 carefully selected horses on location to the rugged mountains, deserts and valleys of Nevada and New Mexico for more than two months of filming.

Although he is a native Philadelphian who was reared in the east, Brooks fell in love with the west when he rode a freight to California during the Depression. He thoroughly researched endurance racing.

"It began in this country when the Denver Post issued a challenge to prove western broncos and mustangs could beat thoroughbreads, blooded Arabians, French cross-country horses and Irish hunters," Brooks said.

"Endurance horse races were held all over the world. The particular race we are doing in the film covered 700 miles in six and a half days and is based on facts.

"A lot of the horses and some of the men died in the old days. We didn't lose a horse or even have one suffer an injury. One of our best horses was 30 years old, too.

"We rounded up Arabians, a steeplechaser, broncos, mustangs, thoroughbreds and all the rest. Our wrangler, Rudy Ugland Jr., made sure the horses were all photogenic. Sounds funny, but it's important.

"There aren't any towns in our picture. Just the west,, an old railroad train and the horses and people."

More staff for B.C.

The provincial cabinet Monday formally approved the hiring of 45 additional staff members for the finance department.

A month ago, the Treasury Board issued a directive to all cabinet ministers ordering a freeze on new staff appointments until after April 1.

Premier Barrett is also finance minister and Treasury Board chairman.

Among the latest appointments are three economists, four audit accountants, four business machine technicians and assorted clerks.

In addition to the 45-person boost to the finance department staff, public works was authorized to hire four new staff members.

The total sum earmarked by cabinet to pay the new staff is $75,444. The provincial fiscal year ends March 31.

In addition to the new staff members, two senior officials got new jobs and pay boosts to go with them.

David Schreck, appointed consultant economist to the Pharmacare program last April at $17,500, is now doing the same job under the Community Resource Boards Act for $25,000 a year.

The order-in-council confirming the appointment states the appointment effective Sept. 1, 1974, six months after the first appointment.

Patrick Tidball became the drug marketing consultant for Pharmacare on April 1, 1974, at a salary of $22,500 a year. On Monday, a cabinet order-in-council confirmed his Sept. 1, 1974, appointment as marketing and administrative consultant to Pharmacare and the Pacific Northwest Native Cooperative Loan Act at a salary of $30,500 a year.

Now you don't have to be rich to have a tax dodge.

This tax dodge is for the average working person, and it's perfectly legal.
Because the Government wants you to save for retirement, they are prepared to give you a legal tax dodge. The amount of tax money you can save is very worthwhile. For example, if you're married with two dependent children, and earned $12,000 last year, your tax saving could amount to over $700.
Here's what the Government says you can do.
Within specified limits you can deposit part of your earned income each year, in a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan and deduct an equal amount from your taxable income. Less taxable income – less tax for the Tax Man. It's that simple. (And if both husband and wife work, both can set up a Plan.)
Even if you're already in a pension plan at work, you can still take advantage of this tax saving.
Because of rising inflation, a company pension may not be enough to guarantee you a comfortable retirement on its own. Here's an opportunity for you to have more money when you retire, and save on your income tax while you're at it.
If you're short of cash you can still get in.
We can loan you the money to start a Plan. In most cases, right on the spot, and with no red tape. We call it our "Instant Retirement Savings Loan". And get this tax dodge! The interest on the loan is also tax deductible.
Your money isn't locked in forever.
With a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan there is no obligation to make future deposits and no sales commission to pay. Should you decide to forget the whole thing, you can get your money out. (But if you do, you'll have to pay the appropriate income tax.)
March 1st is the deadline.
If you decide you want to save on your 1974 taxes, better do it by March 1st. That's the deadline the Government has set. Nobody, not even the rich, can use this tax dodge after that.
And here's the Grabber.
Win one of four Ford Maverick Grabbers.
For an opportunity to win, all you have to do is deposit $250 or more in a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan by the March 1st deadline.

The first four names drawn will each win a brand new Ford Maverick Grabber! (After correctly answering an arithmetical, time-limited, skill-testing question.) So hurry. Grab all the tax savings you can by March 1st and you may grab yourself a Grabber too. What's more, if you win a Grabber, and you made your deposit by February 15th, you'll also win 1,000 gallons of gas.
This contest and the rules are available only at Canada Trust branches in Ontario, The Prairie Provinces and B.C.

Vote goes for strike

With more than half of the balloting complete, about 88 per cent of the Greater Victoria membership of the trades and labor group of the Public Service Alliance have voted in favor of strike action.

The workers, who are voting across the country this week on whether to reject a conciliation board report, will be in a legal position to strike at midnight Friday.

Tom Dalzell, the union's Victoria business agent, said Monday voting by the approximately 500 workers here will be completed today, but added that with about three-fifths of the votes in, 88 per cent have rejected the conciliation board offer and have backed strike action.

The union will conduct national rotating strikes. Many federal operations, including airports, will be affected.

Victoria International Airport manager John Knowland would not comment Monday on what affect a strike would have on airport operations here, but did say that a large percentage of airport workers are organized into the trades and labor component.

Dalzell complained that union members have been left with a "false impression" of the terms of the conciliation report.

The 26 per cent increase over a two-year contract recommended by the board is based on the increase in the gross payroll, he explained, and for some individual trades, the raise will be less than 26 per cent.

High living

It's been busy life for 104-year-old Mary Pendergrass who attributes her longevity to a "power higher than me." She now lives at the Americana Convalescent Home in Longview, Wash., but until she was 102 she lived with a niece in Kelso, Wash. She was born in North Carolina Feb. 3, 1871, and moved to Longview in 1955.

Two judges retire early

Two provincial court judges will retire March 3, five years earlier than scheduled, on pensions totalling $1,750 a month until 1980.

Judge Lawrence Eckhardt, Vancouver, and Judge Harold Mahon, North Vancouver, were originally to retire at age 75. A cabinet order made public Monday states that they will now retire this year with special pension payments made until their retirement pension payments come into effect.

Eckhardt will receive his $1,750 a month until February 1980. Mahon will receive his special payment until December, 1979.

By retiring five years before the date agreed to when accepting their appointments to the bench both judges had indicated that they would be "unduly prejudiced by enforced early retirement."

Both judges at present receive $35,000 a year.

Holdup trial opens

The trial of Frank Guiney, 42, of 304 Oswego, on two counts of armed robbery following a holdup last Sept. 5 at the Criterion Club, 562 Yates, opened in Victoria County Court Monday.

Leo Arnold Baker, 24, of 885 Craigflower, had been charged with Guiney but a stay of proceedings was ordered by Crown counsel R. B. Hutchison.

Hutchison said after court adjourned Monday that the action was taken because of insufficient evidence.

The trial of Guiney continues today.

DECISION

Ottawa, February 3, 1975.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission announces the following decisions effective February 3, 1975.

Decision CRTC 75-37

VICTORIA, B.C.

Application by Capital Broadcasting System Limited for renewal of its broadcasting licence for CKDA Victoria, B.C. expiring March 31, 1975.

Decision: APPROVED

Decision CRTC 75-38

VICTORIA, B.C.

Application by CFAX Radio 1070 Limited for renewal of its broadcasting licence for CFAX Victoria, B.C. expiring March 31, 1975.

Decision: APPROVED

The Commission renews these licences from April 1, 1975 to March 31, 1978 subject to conditions to be specified therein. This term will enable the Commission to consider renewal of these licences at the same time as that of other licences in this region.

An intervention at the October 22, 1974 Public Hearing of the Commission in Vancouver, addressing itself primarily to CKDA and CFAX, expressed a hope shared by many people with regard to the quality of radio broadcasting and the need for a radio service that is more than a promotional device.

The Commission reminds these licensees of their responsibility to examine their community's needs continually, and to direct substantially the greater part of their energies to programming activities rather than to promotional activities.

At the Public Hearing, the licensee of CKDA stated that it intended to improve the quality of the station's news service and staff. The Commission expects to receive, within six months, from the applicant a proposal as to how this objective is to be attained.

With respect to CFAX, the Commission is concerned with the amount of promotional and commercial references, activities and devices, and the manner in which they permeate the overall programming of the station. The Commission expects the licensee to reduce the incidence of such material in its programming.

The Commission intends to review these concerns with the licensees at licence renewal time.

Decision CRTC 75-39

VICTORIA, B.C.

Application by Capital Broadcasting System Limited for renewal of its broadcasting licence for CFMS-FM Victoria, B.C. expiring March 31, 1975.

Decision: APPROVED

The Commission issues a licence expiring March 31, 1976 subject to conditions to be specified therein. This term will enable the Commission to review this licence in the context of its FM policy.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ADAMS—In loving memory of our son and brother, Shawn Eric Adams who passed away, Feb. 11, 1967.
A wonderful son, and brother laid to rest,
For each of us he did his best,
His place on earth, no one can fill,
We miss you Shawn, and alway's will.
We miss you Shawn, and always will.
What would we give if we could say "Hi Shawn" in the same old way.
To hear your voice, to see you smile, to sit and talk with you a while, to be together the same old way.
Would be our dearest wish today.
Dear Lord forgive a silent tear, a constant wish that he were here.
Others are taken yes we know.
But he was our's and we loved him so.
You left, suddenly, your thoughts unknown,
But you left a memory, we are proud to own.
Always loved, missed and never forgotten. Your mum, dad Harris, sisters and brothers.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR HE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

CHANNEL ONE: Football's recent Superbowl was watched in 29 million U.S. homes and the ratings people say that's the most ever for a scheduled TV program. The previous high was 28 million for ABC's 1973 showing of Airport . . . speaking of ratings, the initial Jeffersons and Smothers Brothers shows did well, rating fourth and sixth that week.

The CBC says Elwood Glover, host of Luncheon Date for 11 years, will quit after this summer to "take things a little easier." It will be replaced next fall by a similar show with greater audience participation . . . note to Pete Fookler of Ladysmith: in Gone With The Wind, Ashley Wilkes was Scarlett's neighbor, Melanie was Ashley's cousin (and wife) and Scarlett and Melanie were not related. Of such are great films made.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's answer — I would think every viewer would pick Dragnet as the police series which lasted the longest. But how many of you chose Adam-12 as No. 2? This is its seventh season, all with Martin Milner and Kent McCord as co-stars, and its low ratings ensure this will be the last.

Today's question — Okay, so Jose Ferrer won an Oscar for nosing around in Cyrano de Bergerac. Name the actor and actress who portrayed the lovers; she later co-starred with Anthony Quinn on TV. The answers Wednesday.

Tuesday highlights

7:00 p.m. — The new Cher variety series, having started with a special last week, now starts its regular run. Whoopee — 8.

● 10:00 — Soundstage has a rare TV appearance by contemporary jazz great Herbie Hancock. And Chick Corea swings, too — 9.

11:30 — ABC's newest late-night suspenser is Run, Stranger, Run and stars Patricia Neal, Cloris Leachman and Ron Howard. Big talent at this time — 4.

Tuesday movies

12:45 noon — Whirlpool (dated, dull 1950 kleptomaniac thing), Gene Tierney, Jose Ferrer. Apropos of nothing, if a man named Vagun built saunas, would he call his product Sauna Vagun? — 8.

1:00 p.m. — Portrait of a Mobster (only fair 1961 gangster violence). Vic Morrow hams it up as Dutch Schultz — 11.

3:30 — Downhill Racer (flat 1969 ski-bum stinker), Robert Redford, Gene Hackman. Schuss! Don't tell a soul it's here — 5.

7:00 — Magnificent Thief (1967 It Takes a Thief pilot), Robert Wagner. For fans only — 12.

8:00 — Sara T., Portrait of a Teenage Alcoholic (new Linda Blair epic). Said to be good but pity Miss Blair, who has gone from devil-ridden to a delinquent in a TV movie last year to a drunk — 4.

8:30 — The Trial of Chaplain Jensen (new services drama, might be all right), James Franciscus, Joanna Miles, Lynda Day George — 4.

9:00 — Second Time Around (1961 romanticomedy bore), Debbie Reynolds, Andy Griffith. Twice around Debbie would give anyone a terminal case of the cutes — 11.

11:30 — The Two Million Clams of Cap'n Jack (1973 Banacek) — 12.

11:45 — All My Darling Daughters (fair 1972 Father Knows Best), Robert Young. Having four daughters is a healthy case of the cutes — 7.

12:00 — Night Visitor (1971 Danish frame thriller), Max Von Sydow, Liv Ullman, Trevor Howard. New to me but that's a fine cast — 2.

● 12:00 — The Questor Tapes (dandy 1973 sci-fi), Robert Foxworth, Mike Farrell. One of those rare movies which improves with each viewing — 6.

12:00 — Nothing But The Best (good 1964 English black comedy), Alan Bates, Denholm Elliott. If you like gallows humor, a must — 8.

2:05 a.m. — Emergency (popular 1971 pilot). The whole gang — 6.

2:05 — Maryjane (dopey 1968 teacher-frame), Diane McBain, Fabian. Sorry — 8.

2:30 — Miss Tatlock's Millions (1948 romanticomedy). Ignore everything but Barry Fitzgerald, who made the Irish cutes bearable — 7.

Tuesday radio

7:00 p.m. — A Vancouver orchestra concert — CBU-FM (105.7).

● 8:00 — CBC Tuesday Night's great-comedies series reaches Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra. With Budd Knapp, Toby Tarnow — CBU (690).

8:30 — Western Canada hockey, Kamloops at Victoria CJVI (900).

● —Recommended.

Port Alberni car co-op a success from the start

By JOHN HENDERSON
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI—As far as its president and members know, it's the first of its kind in Canada—and quite possibly in North America.

It began in 1972 when the Port Alberni Labor Council thought it might be able to save people money by starting a food co-operative. When the council looked into the idea, it discovered it probably could not achieve much of a saving on food and turned its attention to the next-largest item in a family budget — transportation.

And so, in September of 1972, the Alpine Car Co-operative was incorporated. It has been a success right from the start.

Opened in '73

Within five months of incorporation, about 530 people had joined the co-op, buying shares at $92 each and paying another $24 for the first year's fees.

With its first $55,000 and a small additional loan, a store-front building was renovated and stocked, gas pumps and other equipment installed, and in April 1973 the co-op was open for business.

1,100 members

Today, says its president, Walter Behn, the membership stands at 1,100, almost double the origin1 number, and the turnover for the first full fiscal year which ended last November was just over $500,000.

"We figure we saved our members about $80,000 on gas alone last year," Behn says.

At current prices—53 and 58 cents a gallon—the co-op's gas prices are almost 25 per cent below those at other service stations, which sell it for 64 and 69.

Loan from B.C.

As the membership grew however, it quickly became apparent that the original facilities of the co-op were not going to be sufficient.

"We went to Gary Lauk, provincial minister of industrial development, last October, and obtained a loan of another $55,000 at prime bank rates," Behn said.

"With this we were able to add five new repair bays to our building and obtain other equipment, such as our new wheel alignment unit. With things going the way they are, we foresee no difficulty in repaying the money."

No undue waiting

The eventual goal of the co-op is a total of 1,500 members. Members are being offered 10 free gallons of gas for any new member they can bring in. The rates now are $100 initial fee and $32 a year.

"We figure with our new expansion that we can handle 1,500 people without any trouble," Ward Haynes, manager of the co-op, said. "We're taking care of the current membership without any undue waiting, and providing emergency service without difficulty. But 1,500 will be about all this building will serve. Then we'll be in a bind again."

Haynes' current staff, all full-time, includes three mechanics, one lube-and-oil man and an apprentice, as well as the usual "girl Friday" in the office. The co-op is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday, and all makes of cars are serviced.

No body work

On these terms, it is impossible to stock a full range of parts, but these are obtained from other local garages and dealers and sold back to members at cost.

There are no facilities for do-it-yourself car owners. "We want to do the job properly," Haynes said, "so we can guarantee it just like any other garage will do."

Haynes estimated that members can save about $20 on a full tune-up, while the saving on other work varies with the parts and labor involved. The shop does no body work.

"But the members save on any job we do, that's for sure," Haynes says. "That's particularly true of two-car families, and there are a lot of them in Port Alberni these days. We're very popular with two-car owners."

Another benefit

Members enjoy another benefit at the co-op as well. Last year, a discount catalogue service was added.

"Members can order from a wide variety of merchandise, particularly in the appliances field," Haynes said. "It's been a very popular addition to our service, and is getting better known all the time. Again, of course, we're running it on a non-profit basis."

Unfortunately, the 1,500 membership level is as far as the co-op will be able to grow without drastic changes. Behn pointed out that the land available at the present site is now all in use.

Average of $150

"We are all happy that it's such a success," Behn said. "Our estimates show that we're saving each of the members from $140 to $150 a year, and that's better than we expected."

Meanwhile, other repair garages and gas outlets in Port Alberni have not been particularly distressed by the appearance of the co-op. It has not affected their business as much as they had first anticipated.

"When the co-op first opened and with what they offered, we thought our service business might drop considerably," said Leo Katilla, a General Motors dealer.

"But it hasn't worked that way—and we've been watching it pretty closely. The servicing has remained fairly constant and the co-op appears to have become simply another local competitor. We sell them parts, just as we do to any garage that needs them."

Gas sales hurt

Katilla and several other dealers, however, said they considered it unfair that the co-op could obtain a low-interest loan from the government.

"I don't see why the people of this city feel they should get their gas at cost and obtain cheaper labor than what we and others offer them," said Joe Molly, president of Molly Motors. "I especially don't see it from labor people themselves."

Molly also sells parts to the co-op and says it has not hurt his business except that "I know I've lost gas sales to them."

Lake Cowichan Bairds still have a chance at finishing in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League playoffs.

Only two points behind fourth-place Fuller Lake Flyers, Bairds can draw even Wednesday with a win in a game at Fuller Lake. And Bairds, who have three games in hand on the Flyers, have a Saturday date at home with last-place Saanich Braves.

League-directors will meet in Victoria on Wednesday to decide the playoff format as all Victoria teams have had home games cancelled by the civic outside workers dispute.

In weekend play, Bairds trimmed Juan de Fuca Gulls, 6-3, and Victoria Nixons eked out a 9-8 decision over Nanaimo Buccaneers in an interlocking game with the North Island League team.

Scott Morrow scored two goals for Bairds and Norm Baker replied with a pair for the third-place Gulls.

At Nanaimo, Larry Hansen and Garth Cunningham each scored twice for Victoria and Grant Currie led the Bucs with three goals.

Tom Griffin tops in two events

Tom Griffin spent a busy weekend running and ended up with two wins.

The 17-year-old athlete won the 1500-metre event Saturday in Vancouver at the B.C. indoor junior and senior championships in 4:02 minutes and then successfully defended his open men's championship in the annual cross-country championships sponsored by the Trafalgar Branch No. 42 of the Canadian Legion with a time of 20:21 minutes for the 4.4-mile course which started and finished at Beacon Hill Park.

Canadian eyes record

ALBUQUERQUE (UPI) At age 18, Greg Joy of New Westminster figures he hasn't reached his peak as a high jumper. But the young Canadian doesn't want to waste any time getting there.

Joy, competing for the University of Texas-El Paso track team, set an American collegiate indoor high jump record on the weekend with a jump of 7 feet, 4 inches.

"I think I'll break the world record (7-5) within the next month," Joy said after his jump in the Western Athletic Conference indoor track and field championships.

Joy's jump also set a WAC record. The old record of 7-2 1-16 was set by Robert Joseph of Arizona in 1973.

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

One intriguing part of my job is the annual search for new and interesting seeds to be described each spring to our readers.

This involves not only considerable correspondence with plant breeders and hybridizers in many parts of the world, but whenever possible I try to get around and talk to a few leading seedsmen in the U.S. and Canada.

A few years ago, on one of these visits, I was surprised to find a couple of giant humidifiers going full blast in the seed storage warehouse, belching great clouds of steam into the air.

An attendant was tapping the dial of an instrument on the wall and reported anxiously to my host that he was having some trouble keeping the relative humidity up to 60 per cent.

★ ★ ★

"Why all the fuss about humidity?" I asked. "Does dry air hurt the seeds?"

"Yes, some of them lose the power to germinate if allowed to dry out too much," he explained. "But that isn't all. They lose weight, too, if stored under too dry conditions."

He went on to point out that a half-pound packet of garden peas, say, could lose as much as half an ounce of weight if stored at 30 per cent humidity, and the sale of such a short-weight packet could lead to a substantial fine under the Canada Weights and Measures Act.

Some seedsmen are now packing their seeds in moisture-proof foil packets so no seed moisture can be lost to the outer air, and paper packets of vegetable seeds are invariably dated.

★ ★ ★

When we browse through the seed racks in the garden centres, making our selection from the thousands of gaily decorated packets, few of us give any thought to the work that has gone into the breeding, growing and preparation of the seeds.

But anyone who has ever cleaned, dried and packaged even a small quantity of home-gathered seed must realize the care and infinite attention to detail necessary.

We take it for granted that the seeds we buy will come up and grow, providing we give them the simple culutre required.

Different kinds of seeds do, of course, demand different germinating temperatures and different depths of planting, and it is only common sense to find out these details before sowing.

★ ★ ★

We take it for granted, too, the natural miracle of the seed itself — something which should fill us with wonder and awe if we only start to consider.

This seed will become a tiny blade of grass; this one, hardly any bigger, will grow into a giant forest tree, and this one an incredibly beautiful flower.

Of three look-alike seeds that sit on my desk as I write, one will produce a nutritious vegetable, another a deadly poison, and the third a healing medicine.

Even nature's varied methods for seed dispersal are wonderful — for seeds must always emigrate and seek new lands to colonize.

★ ★ ★

Some, like dandelions and milkweed, are airborne paratroopers; some — the maples and sycamores — have a helicopter method of travel. Burrs and Devil's Pitchforks are hitch-hikers, making their way to new ground by clinging to our clothing and to the coats of animals.

The seeds of gorse and broom and impatiens blast off like buckshot from the bursting seed pod.

The seeds of our berried shrubs travel as passengers within the digestive system of birds, while the greatest wanderer of all — the coconut — will journey for 1,000 miles or more on the ocean's currents to colonize a distant tropical island.

Arthur Hoppe

WASHINGTON — Good morning, insomniacs. It's time for The Awful Late Show, featuring that awful old movie, The Comeback Kid — starring the beloved old ex-champ, Dick, and his loyal wife, Pat, who has always wanted him to quit the fight game forever.

As you remember, The Comeback Kid hadn't won a fight for 16 years until he finally captured the title on a split decision. But then, at the height of fame and fortune and only after a long, grueling battle, he was tossed out of the ring for fighting dirty. Ever since, he's been recovering from his injuries. But now . . .

★ ★ ★

The Kid (shadow boxing around the room): Take that for America, you dirty rats. And that! And that!

Pat (entering aghast): Kid! You should be resting.

The Kid: Don't worry, baby. The Doc says I'm back in shape. He says I can now travel anywhere in the country, even Washington. You can't keep a good man down.

Pat (pleading): But, Kid, your trials in Washington are over.

The Kid (nodding): That's another reason I'm feeling better. Like I told old Barry when he came to visit last week, now I'm ready to get back in the ring, striking blows for an effective foreign policy, decency in government . . .

Pat: Why don't you just stick to foreign policy, Kid?

The Kid: Then I'm going to go around helping young comers I like, giving them advice and my invaluable public support.

Pat: You mean they want it?

The Kid: Sure. Already a post card's come flooding in. Listen to this: 'If you want to help me out, why don't you go to Uganda?' That's funny, I don't remember any comers in Uganda.

Pat (wringing her hands): Don't you see, Kid? You're through. You're washed up. They don't want you any more. You're no longer the champ.

The Kid: I only lost my title on a technicality.

Pat: Kid, they've got the evidence on your own tapes. They disqualified you for a low blow.

The Kid: It sure was a low blow, disqualifying me. But I'll get the title back. First, I'll have to fight a few prelims. Line up Helen Gahagen Douglas. She's a pushover. Then I'll take on that bumbling club fighter, Brown, who knocked me out with a lucky punch. I understand he just recaptured the California title. Then . . .

Pat: No, Kid, that's his son who has it now.

The Kid (frowning): Time sure does fly. Well, it won't be easy. But I'm no quitter. And I'm not a crook either.

Pat (falling to her knees): Please, Kid, renounce the sordid fight game and remain the simple, unspoiled, rich real estate entrepreneur I have come to know and love.

The Kid: Fighting's in my blood, baby. But I'll make it back to the top. Jewels from foreign potenates, limousines, Easy street. Don't worry, this time I'm not going to make the same mistake.

Pat: What mistake, Kid?

The Kid (punching his palm with his fist): This time I'm not going to buy a tape recorder.

Sydney Harris

What is to be remarked in the recent death of Edward A. Pierce — who was the last living original member of the largest brokerage house in the United States — was not his age of 100, nor the fact that his wife is still living at age 102, but that he was one of the very few men of business who understood the Great Depression of 1929.

When the market crashed so precipitously, Pierce promptly supported the government's proposal to regulate stockbrokers under a strong federal law.

While most others of his ilk fulminated against "government interference" with the market, he was shrewd enough to see that only assured protection for the investor could restore confidence in trading.

★ ★ ★

In this attitude, he joined a rare small band of businessmen with foresight. Most bankers, also, vociferously objected to government insurance of bank deposits, calling it a move toward socialism and dictatorship and all that sort of nonsense.

In point of fact, federal insurance was the best thing that could have happened to the banking industry, and accounted in no small part for the tremendous surge in that business during the next two decades.

Without it, people would have burrowed their savings in their mattresses, and little money would have been available for capital investments.

What is absolutely astonishing about the ruling cliques of any society at any time in history is their blindness as to what is in their own best interest.

With their sights firmly fastened on the past, they suicidally embrace whatever has become useless or dangerous, and rabidly reject whatever is practicable and necessary for their survival.

★ ★ ★

Every monarchy I can think of has fallen because it refused to adapt itself, refused to moderate its absolutist principles, and broke because it would not bend.

There is something inherent in being a ruling class — and it doesn't matter if this class is a community oligarchy, such as in Russia and China — that steadily makes it impervious to its own real needs for revision and reform.

Perhaps it is in the nature of power to look backward, to live nostalgically, and to construe the future only in terms of the past.

This is, eventually, how all social change comes about: institutions collapse not so much through the machinations of their enemies as by the myopia of the institutional leaders themselves, frozen in their attitudes and responses.

★ ★ ★

The great social cataclysm of our age, the Russian Revolution, need never have happened if the Czar and his advisers had been smarter and more pliable.

It is only a few perceptive leaders, in any era, who see the necessity for anticipating and inviting change — and they are usually, like Franklin Roosevelt, dubbed "traitors" to their class.

"The good is that he got rid of Las Vegas' image that tied it up with organized crime. The bad is that he bought up so much land, most of it choice, that other investors can't build new hotels where they want."

Greenspun said before Hughes, Las Vegas was unable to attract sophisticated money — i.e., banks, insurance companies, etc. When Hughes moved in, the legitimate moneylenders followed.

A third of these students given aid

Financial assistance available for students at Shawnigan Lake School is greater than at any other independent school in Canada — nearly one-third of the 215 students receive scholarships averaging more than $1,500 each.

The scholarships are given to students who demonstrate superior ability in examinations, and bursaries to boys whose parents are unable to afford the full fees.

Assistance ranges in individual cases from $500 to $3,700 per year for tuition and board-fees which this year are $3,900.

Donations to the scholarship and bursaries funds come from various sources.

The federal department of Indian affairs and northern development has assisted eight B.C. Indian students for the past three years and one of them, Sennen Charleson of Port Alberni, graduated from Shawnigan in 1973 with a scholarship to the School of Medicine at McGill University.

Recent donations to the school include:

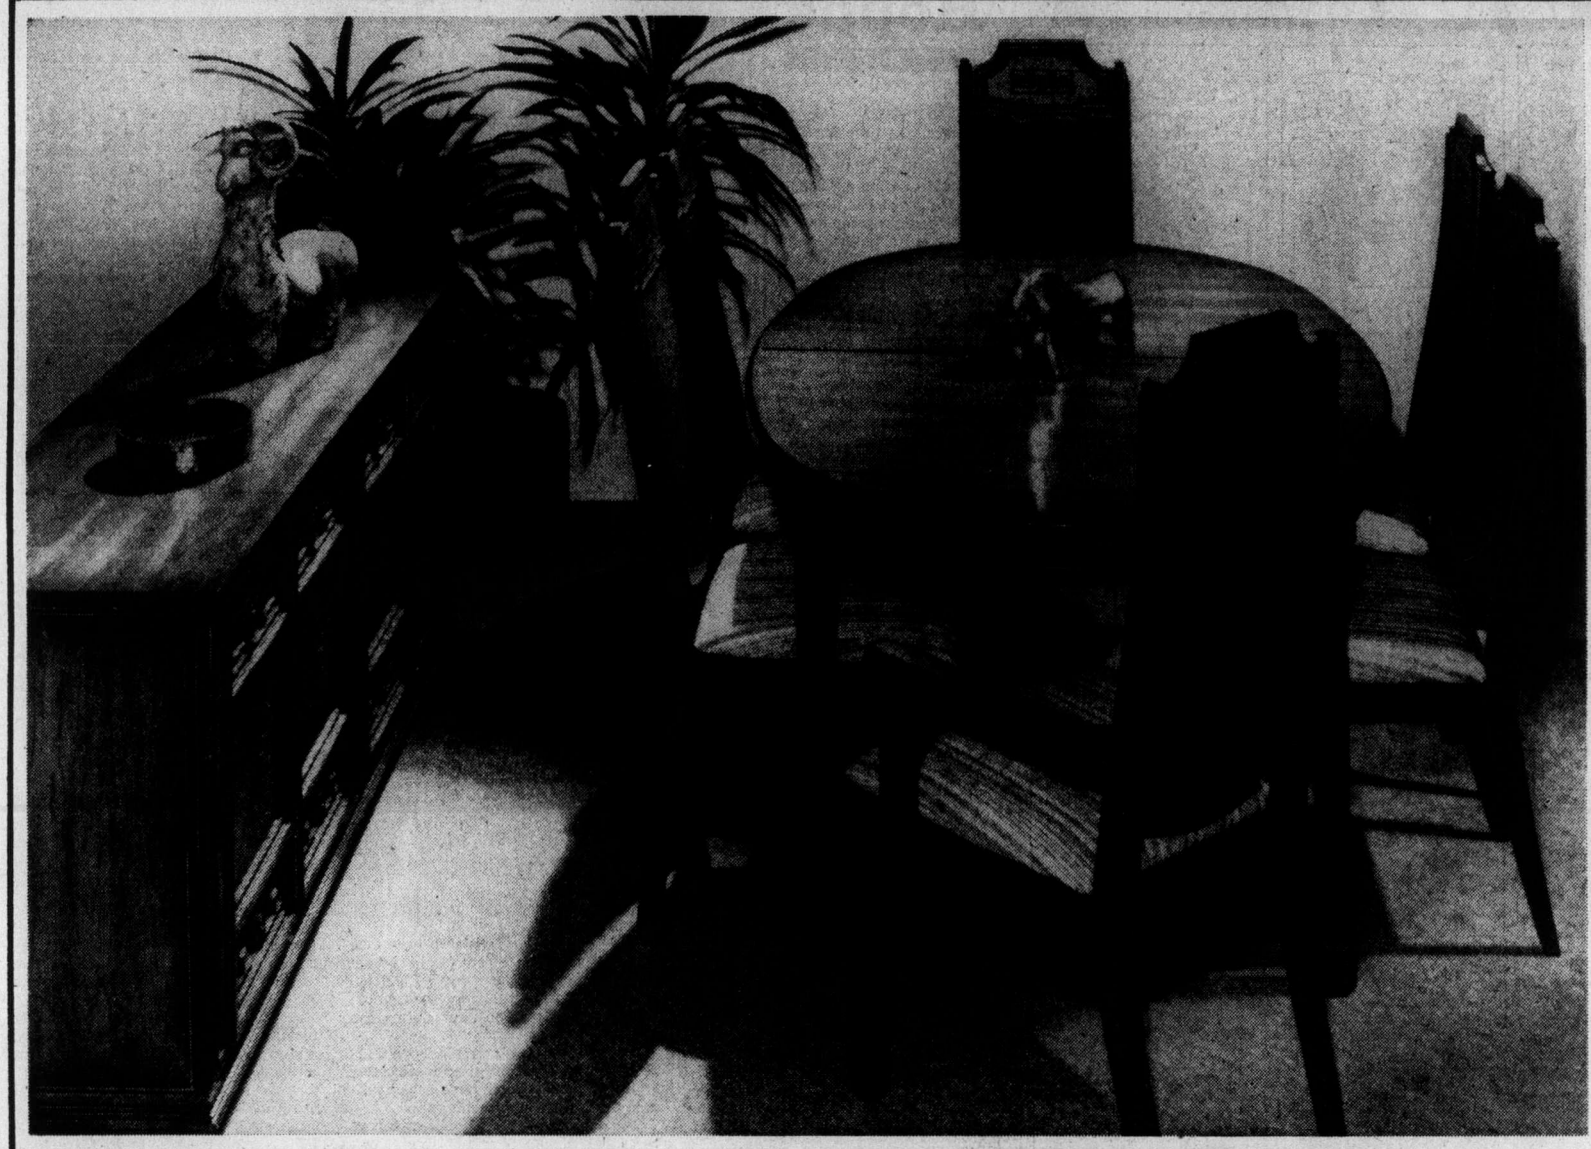

- $50,000 from the Vancouver Foundation, to be spent on scholarships for a five-year period.
- $9,000 from parents and alumni since November.
- Two bequests of $10,000 and $15,000 from the estates of donors.
- A special bursary of $1,800 a year given by a group of physicians in Victoria for a native student, and another $3,000 a year given by the Educational Trust of England.

The total value of assistance provided during the current school year is almost $100,000.

Shawnigan Lake School is an independent boarding school for boys. Most pupils come from Canada and the United States, but there are some from Asia, South America, Europe and Africa.

Canadian shot as U.S. police violate border

OTTAWA (CP)—A chase into Canada by Buffalo, N.Y., police pursuing a truck is being investigated, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Monday.

The truck's driver, James Powless of Fort Erie, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital with a fractured skull.

His lawyer was quoted by police as saying the injury was caused by a bullet fired by Buffalo police during the chase.

Later, an external affairs spokesman said "informal expressions of regret" have been received from the U.S. embassy. The spokesman said no formal response was expected until investigation of the incident was complete.

Following the investigation, "appropriate comments" will be sent to the United States authorities, MacEachen told Derek Blackburn (NDP-Brant) in the Commons.

Earlier, immigration, external affairs and customs spokesmen said Niagara regional police and the RCMP were being questioned about the incident, in which the U.S. police fought with the truck driver and passengers after catching them at Fort Erie, Ont.

Blackburn requested that MacEachen's comments to U.S. authorities say "exactly what U.S. police can and cannot do in this county and assure that it never happens again."

The truck, bearing Ontario licence plates, was chased across the Peace Bridge early Saturday. Immigration officials said they were unable to get the Buffalo police to return to the U.S.

They eventually went back, but only after Niagara police were called to the scene by immigration officials.

Before the Buffalo police fled back across the border, they caught the truck and became involved in a fight with its occupants.

Killings mar IRA truce

BELFAST (UPI) — An open-ended Irish Republican Army cease-fire went into effect Monday night but a wave of random killings apparently aimed at Roman Catholics took at least five lives in 48 hours.

The truce called by the provisional wing of the IRA in its more than five-year war to try to drive British troops from Northern Ireland went into effect at 6 p.m. in Northern Ireland and Britain.

But it was overshadowed by a burst of killings of Roman Catholics, apparently carried out by fanatic Protestant gunmen seeking to keep sectarian tensions high.

More than 1,200 persons have died in IRA violence and counter-violence from the Protestant majority, which wishes to remain linked with the British crown, since the current strife started in August, 1969. The British army has been caught in the middle.

The latest killing came in a small Catholic-owned country pub at The Rock Village, 35 miles west of Belfast, five hours after the cease-fire went into effect.

The British army said one or two gunmen walked into the bar crowded with patrons celebrating the cease-fire and sprayed it with automatic weapons fire.

One man was killed and at least two more were critically injured.

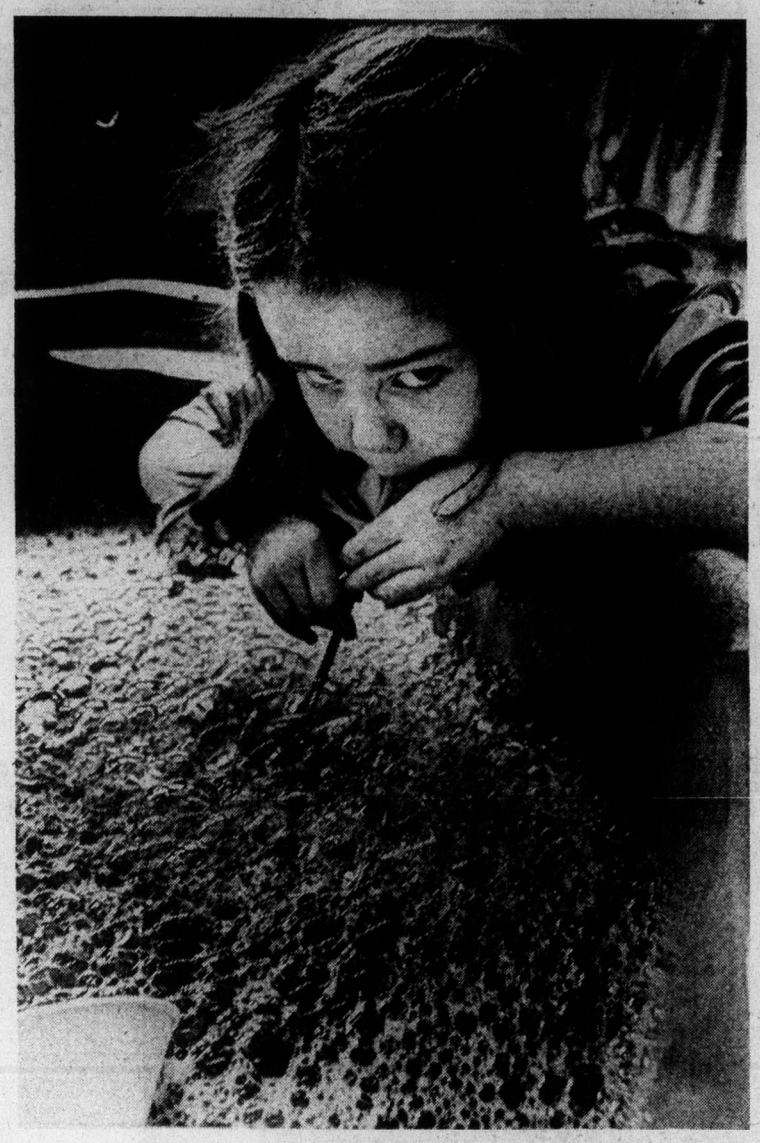

Fifteen hours earlier, gunmen shooting from a cruising automobile shot and killed a 19-year-old Roman Catholic street sweeper in south Belfast.

Three others, all Catholics, died Sunday.

Secret negotiations between British officials and leaders of the IRA political wing, Sinn Fein, were said to have led to the truce. Terms of the agreement were not made public.

IRA leaders had said there could be no cease-fire unless the demands of 15 of its hunger strikers from Ireland's Portlaoise jail were met. The Dublin government refused but the truce was announced away.

It was preceded by a wave of apparently Protestant attacks against a Catholic community whose members support the IRA, the latest violence in the four weeks since the previous truce expired.

Curtailing court staff stops clash with CUPE

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The first court confrontation of the 15-day CUPE dispute was avoided Monday when the B.C. attorney-general's department agreed to CUPE terms for drastically-reduced operations at Victoria Provincial Court and two other centres in Victoria.

Spokesman John Marshall of the locked-out inside workers' Local 388 said: "The attorney-general's office agreed to the terms, rather than take out an injunction."

His comment came at the end of a work day filled with rumors that the NDP government would go to B.C. Supreme Court today for an injunction what would keep Victoria Provincial Court at 633 Fisgard, family court at 2020 Cameron and the juvenile detention home at 1125 Pembroke in full operation.

A government source said a bid for an injunction was being considered, but Marshall's later announcement indicated the government had junked the idea.

The possibility of an injunction isn't over, however. Marshall said a new employee-pass system worked out with the government was only good for 48 hours.

Most workers in the three buildings belong to the B.C. Government Employees' Union. When the outside workers' Local 50 of CUPE went on strike Jan. 27, the building at 633 Fisgard was picketed because it is owned by the city.

The 20 BCGEU members who work in and around the three court sections decided not to cross the picket lines and courts were delayed two hours before passes were arranged for seven BCGEU members to keep basic court services alive.

Monday morning, newly locked-out Local 388 took a tougher stand, saying no passes through picket lines would be issued "until management agrees to sit down and negotiate in good faith — unless it's a matter of life or death, or public safety."

This meant CUPE pickets would stay outside the Victoria police station and firehalls, allowing policemen and firemen to do regular work but cutting off weekly supplies to main fuel tanks.

When present supplies run out, police cars and fire vehicles will have to go to service stations for replenishment at a cost higher than the city's supply contract.

The effect of Local 388's tougher stand was more drastic on these buildings:

'Just wait, just watch'

Tax rebate buyers under B.C.'s guns

The provincial department of consumer services is planning its first prosecution against income tax rebate companies.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Monday a new regulation added to the Trade Practices Act and becoming effective this morning would enable her department's lawyer to proceed with prosecutions against income tax loan companies charging exorbitant interest rates.

The new regulation states that B.C. courts may now look into tax rebate schemes where the consumer receives such a small amount from the rebater that the result is judged to be "harsh or inequitable" to the taxpayer.

Ms. Young said the new regulation permitting her department to launch court action was "not a total answer" but that it would enable both consumers and her department to fight the worst cases in court.

Neither Ms. Young nor deputy minister William Neilson would name the worst offenders, or state when the first prosecution would begin.

"Just watch," Neilson said.

Ms. Young said her decision, with cabinet backing, to take action against tax rebaters came as a result of the reluctance of federal authorities to make the first move.

"Ottawa has all the power in the world to put these rebaters out of business," she said, "but the federal authorities are taking forever to crack down on these outfits." Ms. Young said all Ottawa had to do was make it illegal for a tax rebate to go to anyone but the taxpayer meriting the rebate.

While most tax rebate businesses came in for harsh words from the minister, she said the main thrust of her legal staff would be against those obviously charging too much for their "advance loans."

The minister said one of the worst cases her department had come across so far involved a company charging an interest rate so high that it worked out to 4,000 per cent annually.

She declined to name the firm, and when Neilson was asked if this would be the first company prosecuted, he again answered, "just wait, just watch."

"This is not the first year tax refund buyers have operated in this province," the minister said, "but this year there seems to be a new twist to their operations. In previous years, a person who sold his refund for an agreed percentage — say 50 per cent — usually received that 50 per cent in cash immediately.

"This year, people are selling their refunds in the same manner and, we think, under

Hamburgers better than prime rate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Bank of America asked some children to define the prime interest rate.

"That's easy," said Mark Cabrera, 10. "Mom cooks it when we have company. It's expensive. I like hamburgers better, anyway."

Darren Scola, 11, said the prime rate "is a new game — like Monopoly."

Jeff Crenshaw, 9, said his father had exceeded the prime rate while driving and got a ticket.

Rebels on offensive in fight for airport

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — Fierce battles with rifles, bazookas, rockets and machineguns were reported Monday night in a rebel attempt to gain control of the airport at the besieged northern provincial capital of Asmara, where one-third of the Ethiopian armed forces are bottled up.

Diplomatic sources said Ethiopian troops apparently repulsed the attacks on Johannes airport. The field is the only supply link to northern Eritrea province, with land routes already severed by Moslem insurgents demanding an independent state.

During the day Ethiopian jet fighters bombed rebel zones north of Asmara and a government unit lured out of the city was ambushed and virtually wiped out, the sources said.

Reliable reports said the insurgents had passed word to the army that it could repair a damaged generator, but when engineers and their escorts arrived they were cut down in a crossfire. Casualty figures were not available.

Diplomatic sources say heavy fighting that erupted about two weeks ago has left 4,000 dead, wounded or missing among the rebels, government troops and civilians.

They reported the Addis Ababa military government, worried about the fate of 20,000 soldiers encircled in Asmara, has sent truce overtures to the Eritrean Liberation Front. But the popular Liberation Front, a Marxist faction that joined the ELF, immediately rejected any ceasefire. A front spokesman in Beirut, Lebanon, said there is "no choice but to continue fighting as long as Ethiopia occupies our country."

Diplomats believe the 20,000 troops sent to hold Asmara are one-third of Ethiopia's military strength, and the government fears its manpower is spread too thinly to maintain control in other revolutionary-minded provinces. The Asmara army units are battling an estimated 6,000 rebels who are well equipped with sophisticated weapons supplied by sympathetic Arab countries.

Pill approved but hazardous

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first "morning after" birth control pill in the United States has been given formal approval by the Food and Drug Administration.

The agency said the drug DES, or diethylstilbestrol, is usually effective in preventing pregnancy if two 25-milligram tablets are taken twice a day for five days, within 24 hours and no later than 72 hours after unprotected intercourse.

One company has already applied for permission to market DES as a post-coital contraceptive, when the new approval takes effect March 7. The drug is also used to treat certain kinds of cancer and to speed growth in beef cattle. U.S. beef was banned from Canada for a time because of the possibility of DES residue.

Because of concerns that DES may cause cancer when taken over prolonged periods, the FDA said it would require patient brochures and labelling which stress that the drug should be taken only in emergencies, such as rape. Physicians will be free, however, to define emergency situations in each woman's case.

The FDA said labelling would advise a woman who takes the drug and later discovers she is pregnant to consult a physician. Scores of young girls whose mothers took DES during pregnancy later developed rare vaginal and cervical cancer.

"The final decision as to the course of action to be taken rests with the patient and her physician," the FDA said.

What is teen heiress' fate?

In triple-killer's clutches

LONDON (UPI) — Police disclosed Monday that missing teenage heiress Lesley Whittle was kidnapped by Britain's most dangerous criminal, a triple killer known as the Black Panther and the Hood.

Miss Whittle, 17, was kidnapped from the bedroom of her home in Highley on Jan. 14. The kidnapper subsequently telephoned a demand for $120,000 ransom, but never showed up at the rendezvous point to pick it up.

No trace of Miss Whittle, who inherits $480,000 from her late father's estate when she turns 21, has been found.

A police spokesman said a nationwide hunt is on for the kidnapper, "the most dangerous criminal at large in Britain." A reward of $60,000 has been offered for information leading to his arrest.

Police broke a two-week news blackout on the case to say the kidnapper was definitely the same man who killed three postal workers with a shotgun last year in the Midlands.

"This wanted man is a cold, very calculating individual who is ruthless when cornered," Detective Chief Superintendent Robert Booth said. "Don't have a go at detaining him. Tell us your suspicions and we'll do the rest."

Booth said the definitive clue in the case was the kidnap getaway car, found 150 yards from where night watchman Gerald Smith surprised the man and was shot down by him. Smith lived to provide a description.

The nicknames Black Panther and the Hood are derived from the fact that the man dresses in black and occasionally wears a hood.

According to the police, the man is between 30 and 40 years old, stands about five-foot-six and is of slim, athletic build. He is said to have carried out more than 100 armed robberies.

The reward for information leading to his arrest was offered by the National Federation of Subpostmasters, whose membership includes the three shotgun murder victims.

Dam stall result of bad evidence

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

Incomplete and erroneous evidence to a special cabinet committee brought about the freeze on the Chemainus River dam project last Friday.

In announing the decision to suspend plans to divert and store water from the Chemainus to supply domestic water to the District of North Cowichan, Recreation Minister Jack Radford made no mention of the evidence presented to the special committee last April.

But the official cabinet order made public Monday left no doubt as to the reasons the full cabinet reversed the earlier committee decision.

The cabinet was concerned, the order stated, "that evidence presented to the cabinet committee . . . was incomplete or erroneous."

Objectors to the dam, proposed by North Cowichan, claimed last spring that the municipality's presentation to the cabinet committee was at least misleading.

When North Cowichan first proposed damming the Chemainus, its application to store and divert water was rejected by the provincial comptroller of water rights on the grounds that other sources of domestic water were available.

As a result of that decision the municipality appealed to the special cabinet committee. The committee upheld the North Cowichan appeal and granted two conditional water licences, in effect giving the municipality the right to go ahead with the project.

When cabinet met last Thursday that decision was reversed, the licences suspended until a full public inquiry can be held to determine the environmental impact of the dam on the salmon and steelhead runs in the Chemainus.

Members' cars lined up outside co-op, waiting their turn in service bays

By JOHN HENDERSON
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI—As far as its president and members know, it's the first of its kind in Canada—and quite possibly in North America.

It began in 1972 when the Port Alberni Labor Council thought it might be able to save people money by starting a food co-operative. When the council looked into the idea, it discovered it probably could not achieve much of a saving on food and turned its attention to the next-largest item in a family budget — transportation.

And so, in September of 1972, the Alpine Car Co-operative was incorporated. It has been a success right from the start.

Opened in '73

Within five months of incorporation, about 530 people had joined the co-op, buying shares at $92 each and paying another $24 for the first year's fees.

With its first $55,000 and a small additional loan, a storefront building was renovated and stocked, gas pumps and other equipment installed, and in April 1973 the co-op was open for business.

1,100 members

Today, says its president, Walter Behn, the membership stands at 1,100, almost double the origin number, and the turnover for the first full fiscal year which ended last November was just over $500,000.

"We figure we saved our members about $80,000 on gas alone last year," Behn says.

At current prices—53 and 58 cents a gallon—the co-op's gas prices are almost 25 per cent below those at other service stations, which sell it for 64 and 69.

Loan from B.C.

As the membership grew however, it quickly became apparent that the original facilities of the co-op were not going to be sufficient.

"We went to Gary Lauk, provincial minister of industrial development, last October, and obtained a loan of another $55,000 at prime bank rates," Behn said.

"With this we were able to add five new repair bays to our building and obtain other equipment, such as our new wheel alignment unit. With things going the way they are, we foresee no difficulty in repaying the money."

No undue waiting

The eventual goal of the co-op is a total of 1,500 members. Members are being offered 10 free gallons of gas for any new member they can bring in. The rates now are $100 initial fee and $32 a year.

"We figure with our new expansion that we can handle 1,500 people without any trouble," Ward Haynes, manager of the co-op, said. "We're taking care of the current membership without any undue waiting, and providing emergency service without difficulty. But 1,500 will be about all this building will serve. Then we'll be in a bind again."

Haynes' current staff, all full-time, includes three mechanics, one lube-and-oil man and an apprentice, as well as the usual "girl Friday" in the office. The co-op is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday, and all makes of cars are serviced.

No body work

On these terms, it is impossible to stock a full range of parts, but these are obtained from other local garages and dealers and sold back to members at cost.

There are no facilities for do-it-yourself car owners. "We want to do the job properly," Haynes said, "so we can guarantee it just like any other garage will do."

Haynes estimated that members can save about $20 on a full tune-up, while the saving on other work varies with the parts and labor involved. The shop does no body work.

"But the members save on any job we do, that's for sure," Haynes says. "That's particularly true of two-car families, and there are a lot of them in Port Alberni these days. We're very popular with two-car owners."

Another benefit

Members enjoy another benefit at the co-op as well. Last year, a discount catalogue service was added.

"Members can order from a wide variety of merchandise, particularly in the appliances field," Haynes said. "It's been a very popular addition to our service, and is getting better known all the time. Again, of course, we're running it on a non-profit basis."

Unfortunately, the 1,500 membership level is as far as the co-op will be able to grow without drastic changes. Behn pointed out that the land available at the present site is now all in use.

Average of $150

"We are all happy that it's such a success," Behn said. "Our estimates show that we're saving each of the members from $140 to $150 a year, and that's better than we expected."

Meanwhile, other repair garages and gas outlets in Port Alberni have not been particularly distressed by the appearance of the co-op. It has not affected their business as much as they had first anticipated.

"When the co-op first opened and with what they offered, we thought our service business might drop considerably," said Leo Katilla, a General Motors dealer.

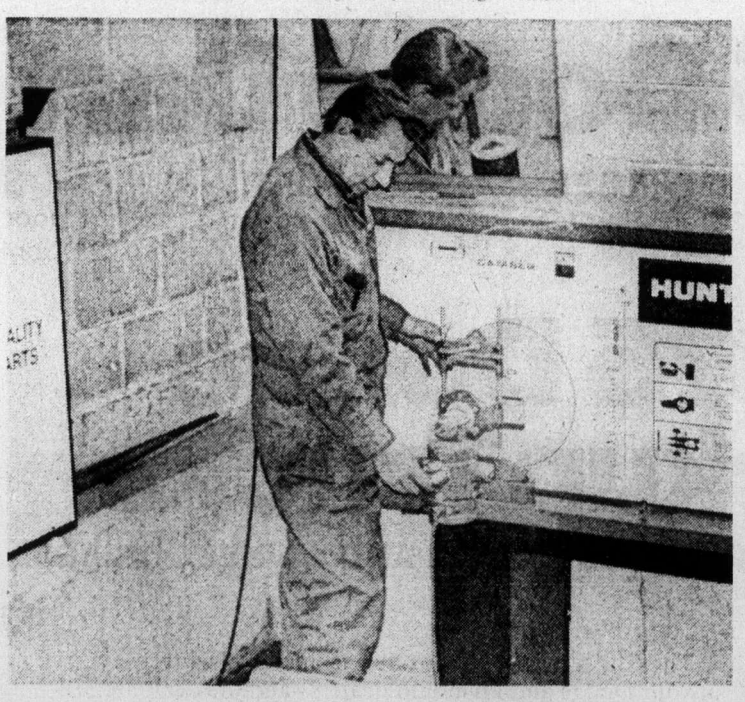

"But it hasn't worked that way—and we've been watching it pretty closely. The servicing has remained fairly constant and the co-op appears to have become simply another local competitor. We sell them parts, just as we do to any garage that needs them."

Gas sales hurt

Katilla and several other dealers, however, said they considered it unfair that the co-op could obtain a low-interest loan from the government.

"I don't see why the people of this city feel they should get their gas at cost and obtain cheaper labor than what we and others offer them," said Joe Molly, president of Molly Motors. "I especially don't see it from labor people themselves."

Molly also sells parts to the co-op and says it has not hurt his business except that "I know I've lost gas sales to them."

Complex planned for Crofton shore

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

A Victoria land development firm has presented North Cowichan council here with preliminary plans for a comprehensive waterfront development in Crofton.

The proposal by Bullock, Guelph and Associates Ltd., called Mariner's Village, includes a marina, shopping centre, hotel, apartment blocks and a residential area.

The 23-acre development, which includes the old Mount Sicker copper smelter, is just south of the Crofton government dock and ferry slip and fronts on Queens Street.

The site consists of open grassland, with a gentle slope to the northeast in the direction of Vesuvius Bay on Salt Spring Island.

The seaward side has been used in past as a tailings dump and is covered to an undetermined depth with fine black tailings.

The other side was the site of the Mount Sicker copper smelter, and is now a jumble of concrete foundations and old trackage.

The developers have requested that Environment Canada do an environmental impact study on the site, especially in the foreshore area where the mine tailings were dumped.

The proposed marina with breakwater, which is on a separate marine lot of four acres, would accommodate an estimated 330 power or sailboats and have the necessary services for the boating public.

A further 35,000 square feet, the developers say, would be available for future developments which might include a yacht club.

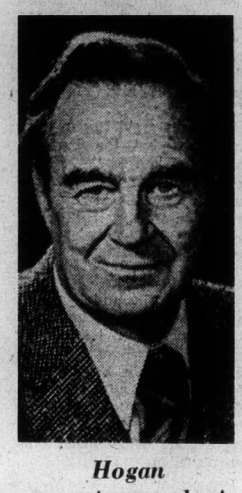

The hotel would have 60 rooms and include a beer parlor. The proposed apartment block, with 48 units, would occupy the site of the old smelter with the bottom floor at marina level. More apartment units are planned, but phased development is envisaged.

A minimum of two acres would be provided for the development of a shopping centre. The developers say in their proposal that if the community of Crofton requires more shopping area it could be made available.

The lowest density is planned in the southwest upper end where 33 single housing units would be located.

Toward the lower part, 18 duplexes would be built near the apartment blocks and row housing, which is planned.

Acting Mayor Dennis Hogan was reluctant to comment on the proposal and emphasized that these were only preliminary plans which haven't received council approval as yet. He also said the seven-member advisory planning commission will be studying the development at its meeting this week.

Extended hours to accommodate Grade 10 influx

COURTENAY — The G.P. Vanier high school will operate on an extended school day next term when 150 Grade 10 students will be transferred there from three junior secondary schools.

Serious overcrowding at Lake Trail, Comox and Courtenay junior secondary schools has necessitated the action, Reginald Cox, superintendent of schools for school district 71, said Monday.

Next term, approximately 600 students will be accommodated in Grade 10 — 150 in each of the four schools.

To arrange this, 100 students from Comox junior secondary, 20 from Courtenay and 30 from Lake Trail will move to Vanier.

Cox said the decision to have about 150 Grade 10 students in each of the major schools was made to decrease enrolment at Comox junior so it can be handled by the existing facilties. With some slight adjustments in other grades, Lake Trail and Courtenay will be able to handle comfortably the students who normally attend them.

Cox also said that in order to give a satisfactory Grade 10 program, including a variety of options, it was necessary to have approximately 150 students in each school.

Selection of students was done at random to protect band and chorus programs at the junior secondary schools, he said.

Cox said music programs every year suffer a setback when the older students graduate or move to a senior school.

Cox said the extended day at Vanier would affect only Grade 11 and 12 and not the Grade 10 students.

Some teachers may be transferred from Comox, Courtenay or Lake Trail to the senior high school, he said, and the 150 new students will boost Vanier's enrollment to approximately 1,100 — 200 more than the school's rated capacity.

Students selected from the Courtenay school are from areas as near as possible to the high school while Lake Trail students who may be picked up at convenient locations by school buses were chosen.

Suspect going to trial

NANAIMO—Ricky Dale Beeman, 25, of Nanaimo, Monday was committed to stand trial on a total of six charges arising out of the escape of three prisoners from sheriff's deputies at Nanaimo airport last Nov. 28.

Police said at the time that the trio overpowered the two deputies and made good their escape on foot.

They have been charged with three counts of attempted murder, forcible seizure of a Nanaimo district woman, assault causing bodily harm and escaping lawful custody.

Two other men, Clare Wilson, 23, and Robert Moyse, 19, were earlier committed to trial on the charges. Beeman made a brief court appearance Monday to have the committal notice read to him by Judge Jack Caldwell.

The committals followed a ruling in B.C. Supreme Court that Caldwell was correct in continuing with the preliminary hearing in the case after counsel for two of the accused failed to show up.

Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe said in that judgement that the lawyers should not have accepted retainers to appear for their clients on the day of the preliminary hearing if, in fact, they had committments elsewhere for that date.

The three will stand trial during the spring session of B.C. Supreme Court, which begins next month.

Beeman also faces trial on another charge of assault causing bodily harm. That charge was laid Jan. 30 after William Petula was beaten in a cell at the Nanaimo RCMP lockup.

Petula required hospital treatment for head injuries suffered in the beating.

On Monday, Beeman was remanded to April 2 for preliminary hearing of that charge.

Herring offer rejected

Fishing strike possible Sunday

A possible province-wide strike affecting 800 Vancouver Island fishermen and 300 shore-workers could take place Sunday.

Some 3,000 B.C. herring fishermen, members of United Fishermen and Allied Worker's Union and Native Brotherhood of B.C., have voted 96 per cent to reject an employers' wage offer of $75 a ton to seine crews and $150 to gillnetter crews.

Local 24 of the union (Victoria, Sidney and Sooke branch) voted 62 per cent to reject the offer which, according to Elgin Neish, secretary-treasurer of the local, represents a cut from last year's prices of 43 per cent to the seiners and 40 per cent to the gillnetters.

Rejection of the offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C. means there will be no fishing by 800 Vancouver Island union and brotherhood members when the West Coast roe herring season starts Sunday, unless a new offer is made before then.

According to Neish, this will affect fishermen in Alert Bay, Sointula, Campbell River, Port Alberni, Sidney and others.

While most Island fishermen have boats equipped to catch salmon as well as herring, the herring is an important mainstay in local fishermen's yearly income.

"The major salmon fishing season does not open until April 15," Neish said, adding that many fisherman are eager to get out early to meet their mortgage payments."

Herring fishing opens for gillnetters Sunday in Area 18, off the east coast of Vancouver Island, from north of Duncan to south of Sidney. Other areas open between Feb. 23 and March 15.

The union and brotherhood are asking for a cost-of-living increase of 14.24 per cent above the 1974 prices, which were $131.50 a ton for seine crews and $250 a ton for gillnetter crews.

Neish said herring quotas for B.C. fishermen are up 12,000 tons this year to a total of 62,000 and two new herring roe treatment plants have been started in Victoria, yet the fisheries association has offered fishermen half what they received last year in spite of expansion in the industry.

Grit leader opposed to steel mill

PARKSVILLE—B.C. Liberal Leader David Anderson said during the weekend he is opposed to the building of a Japanese steel mill anywhere on Vancouver Island.

Anderson, attending the Liberal party policy conference here, said greater studies were needed to determine the impact of such a large project and he would oppose such a development anywhere in the province until such studies had been carried out.

About 200 party members and guests from B.C. and other provinces attended the weekend convention. Panel discussions and workshops were designed to lay groundwork for preparation of resolutions for the party's annual convention, which will be held at Richmond in May.

Minister unhappy with credit card idea

Lawyers: a discount for cash?

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young is wondering if lawyers will give clients a five per cent discount for paying cash when they start accepting credit cards as payment for legal fees.

Benchers of the B.C. Law Society have approved the credit card proposal in principle and hope details will be worked out in a couple of months.

"Master Charge and Chargex will be making a lot of money, the client will be paying 18 per cent interest on the fee directly, and someone will be paying the five per cent charge levied by the credit card companies on the firms they collect for," she noted.

"It's hard to see how that is going to prevent bad debts, but it will put the onus upon someone else to collect."

Ms. Young suggested that lawyers concerned about a client's ability to pay should allow monthly payments directly to the firm.

Consumers Association of Canada provincial president Ada Brown agreed with Ms. Young.

"I am really concerned about this," she said. "I feel this is probably going to create more problems for the people in need of legal services," Ms. Brown said.

"I would have thought that if the lawyers aren't prepared to carry monthly charges themselves, they would have steered their clients to bank or credit unions where loans are cheaper than by credit card."

Ms. Brown felt that anyone in need of legal services probably had enough problems without being advised to use a credit card to pay the bill.

"However, I guess if one is up against it with a legal problem, one would pay as best one could just to get the advice—and legal fees are prohibitive so that few people would have cash on hand for payment."

Rivals show no mercy on Capitals

Like all expansion clubs, Washington Capitals are forced to skate, shoot and score goals before they have learned to walk. They now are experiencing the growing pains of a first-year National Hockey League club, which means they aren't growing fast enough.

"It's frustrating and depressing to say the least," says Doug Mohns, the Capitals' veteran defenceman and captain. "But you can't develop a defeatist attitude. You can't think about the games behind you, you have to think about the games ahead."

If the Capitals' future games resemble their past ones, than a lack of any thought at all might be best.

With two-thirds of the National Hockey League season over, the Capitals are on the verge of making some negative history. After losing 7-3 to New York Rangers Sunday night, they have dropped their first 28 games on the road, which is a continuing NHL record for futility.

Washington coach Jimmy Anderson says the closest they came to a point on the road "was in Chicago when we led 2-0, but we lost 3-2 late in the game."

In 54 games, the Capitals have won four and tied five and appear headed for the most losses, fewest victories and fewest points of any team in a single season.

Anderson says the new playoff format has made it even more difficult for his club to catch an opponent on an off night.

"All the games are important now," he says. "The other clubs are fighting to get into the playoffs or stay in first place. They're just not letting up."

Prior shatters tenpin records

Bill Prior bowled the highest three-game tenpin series of his life Sunday, helping him to two records and three titles in the 35th annual Victoria city men's championships at Mayfair Lanes.

The former professional baseball pitcher had strings of seven strikes in each of his first two games for 245 and 256 and had a slow start before settling for 190 in his final game for a 691 series in the singles event. That score and his handicap score of 757 are both new records for the tournament and his 1757-198—1955 in the handicap all-events was also a winning score. He had 534 the previous weekend in the team event and rolled a 532 in the doubles event which preceded the singles.

Ken Grexton, who had 632 in the team event and 613 in the doubles, slipped to 530 in the singles but still took the scratch all-events title with 1775.

Winners of the handicap doubles were Gary Young and Ken Fuller with a 1331 total, 27 pins more than runners-up over Mrs. Rollick and Mrs. Nillson in the women's doubles final.

Mike Antrobus and Doug Regimbal.

Badminton mostly formful

Only one minor upset marked Sunday's Vancouver-dominated finals of the annual Vancouver Island Open badminton championships at Cordova Bay Community Club.

Second-seeded Mike Epstein of Vancouver downed top-seed Bruce Rollick, 15-6, 15-3, to take the men's singles title.

However, Rollick teamed with Rolf Patterson for a 15-6, 15-3 win over Geoff Harris of Courtenay and Greg Harris of Vancouver in the men's doubles final.

Patterson was a double winner, partnering Mimi Nillsson to a 12-15, 15-4, 17-16 triumph over Bruce and Judi Rollick in the exciting mixed final.

Jane Youngberg was also a double winner, defeating Sandra Stevenson, 11-6, 11-3, in the women's singles and combining with the losing finalist for a 15-9, 14-17, 15-4 victory

Vote goes for strike

With more than half of the balloting complete, about 88 per cent of the Greater Victoria membership of the trades and labor group of the Public Service Alliance have voted in favor of strike action.

The workers, who are voting across the country this week on whether to reject a conciliation board report, will be in a legal position to strike at midnight Friday.

Tom Dalzell, the union's Victoria business agent, said Monday voting by the approximately 500 workers here will be completed today, but added that with about three-fifths of the votes in, 88 per cent have rejected the conciliation board offer and have backed strike action.

The union will conduct national rotating strikes. Many federal operations, including airports, will be affected.

Victoria International Airport manager John Knowland would not comment Monday on what affect a strike would have on airport operations here, but did say that a large percentage of airport workers are organized into the trades and labor component.

Dalzell complained that union members have been left with a "false impression" of the terms of the conciliation report.

The 26 per cent increase over a two-year contract recommended by the board is based on the increase in the gross payroll, he explained, and for some individual trades, the raise will be less than 26 per cent.

High living

It's been busy life for 104-year-old Mary Pendergrass who attributes her longevity to a "power higher than me." She now lives at the Americana Convalescent Home in Longview, Wash., but until she was 102 she lived with a niece in Kelso, Wash. She was born in North Carolina Feb. 3, 1871, and moved to Longview in 1955.

Two judges retire early

Two provincial court judges will retire March 3, five years earlier than scheduled, on pensions totalling $1,750 a month until 1980.

Judge Lawrence Eckhardt, Vancouver, and Judge Harold Mahon, North Vancouver, were originally to retire at age 75. A cabinet order made public Monday states that they will now retire this year with special pension payments made until their retirement pension payments come into effect.

Eckhardt will receive his $1,750 a month until February 1980. Mahon will receive his special payment until December, 1979.

By retiring five years before the date agreed to when accepting their appointments to the bench both judges had indicated that they would be "unduly prejudiced by enforced early retirement."

Both judges at present receive $35,000 a year.

Holdup trial opens

The trial of Frank Guiney, 42, of 304 Oswego, on two counts of armed robbery following a holdup last Sept. 5 at the Criterion Club, 562 Yates, opened in Victoria County Court Monday.

Leo Arnold Baker, 24, of 885 Craigflower, had been charged with Guiney but a stay of proceedings was ordered by Crown counsel R. B. Hutchison.

Hutchison said after court adjourned Monday that the action was taken because of insufficient evidence.

The trial of Guiney continues today.

DECISION

Ottawa, February 3, 1975.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission announces the following decisions effective February 3, 1975.

Decision CRTC 75-37

VICTORIA, B.C.

Application by Capital Broadcasting System Limited for renewal of its broadcasting licence for CKDA Victoria, B.C. expiring March 31, 1975.

Decision: APPROVED

Decision CRTC 75-38

VICTORIA, B.C.

Application by CFAX Radio 1070 Limited for renewal of its broadcasting licence for CFAX Victoria, B.C. expiring March 31, 1975.

Decision: APPROVED

The Commission renews these licences from April 1, 1975 to March 31, 1978 subject to conditions to be specified therein. This term will enable the Commission to consider renewal of these licences at the same time as that of other licences in this region.

An intervention at the October 22, 1974 Public Hearing of the Commission in Vancouver, addressing itself primarily to CKDA and CFAX, expressed a hope shared by many people with regard to the quality of radio broadcasting and the need for a radio service that is more than a promotional device.

The Commission reminds these licensees of their responsibility to examine their community's needs continually, and to direct substantially the greater part of their energies to programming activities rather than to promotional activities.

At the Public Hearing, the licensee of CKDA stated that it intended to improve the quality of the station's news service and staff. The Commission expects to receive, within six months, from the applicant a proposal as to how this objective is to be attained.

With respect to CFAX, the Commission is concerned with the amount of promotional and commercial references, activities and devices, and the manner in which they permeate the overall programming of the station. The Commission expects the licensee to reduce the incidence of such material in its programming.

The Commission intends to review these concerns with the licensees at licence renewal time.

Decision CRTC 75-39

VICTORIA, B.C.

Application by Capital Broadcasting System Limited for renewal of its broadcasting licence for CFMS-FM Victoria, B.C. expiring March 31, 1975.

Decision: APPROVED

The Commission issues a licence expiring March 31, 1976 subject to conditions to be specified therein. This term will enable the Commission to review this licence in the context of its FM policy.

Canadian shot as U.S. police violate border

OTTAWA (CP)—A chase into Canada by Buffalo, N.Y., police pursuing a truck is being investigated, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Monday.

The truck's driver, James Powless of Fort Erie, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital with a fractured skull.

His lawyer was quoted by police as saying the injury was caused by a bullet fired by Buffalo police during the chase.

Later, an external affairs spokesman said "informal expressions of regret" have been received from the U.S. embassy. The spokesman said no formal response was expected until investigation of the incident was complete.

Following the investigation, "appropriate comments" will be sent to the United States authorities, MacEachen told Derek Blackburn (NDP-Brant) in the Commons.

Earlier, immigration, external affairs and customs spokesmen said Niagara regional police and the RCMP were being questioned about the incident, in which the U.S. police fought with the truck driver and passengers after catching them at Fort Erie, Ont.

Blackburn requested that MacEachen's comments to U.S. authorities say "exactly what U.S. police can and cannot do in this country and assure that it never happens again."

The truck, bearing Ontario licence plates, was chased across the Peace Bridge early Saturday. Immigration officials said they were unable to get the Buffalo police to return to the U.S.

They eventually went back, but only after Niagara police were called to the scene by immigration officials.

Before the Buffalo police fled back across the border, they caught the truck and became involved in a fight with its occupants.

Killings mar IRA truce

BELFAST (UPI) — An open-ended Irish Republican Army cease-fire went into effect Monday night but a wave of random killings apparently aimed at Roman Catholics took at least five lives in 48 hours.

The truce called by the provisional wing of the IRA in its more than five-year war to try to drive British troops from Northern Ireland went into effect at 6 p.m. in Northern Ireland and Britain.

But it was overshadowed by a burst of killings of Roman Catholics, apparently carried out by fanatic Protestant gunmen seeking to keep sectarian tensions high.

More than 1,200 persons have died in IRA violence and counter-violence from the Protestant majority, which wishes to remain linked with the British crown, since the current strife started in August, 1969. The British army has been caught in the middle.

The latest killing came in a small Catholic-owned country pub at The Rock Village, 35 miles west of Belfast, five hours after the cease-fire went into effect.

The British army said one or two gunmen walked into the bar crowded with patrons celebrating the cease-fire and sprayed it with automatic weapons fire.

One man was killed and at least two more were critically injured.

Fifteen hours earlier, gunmen shooting from a cruising automobile shot and killed a 19-year-old Roman Catholic street sweeper in south Belfast.

Three others, all Catholics, died Sunday.

Secret negotiations between British officials and leaders of the IRA political wing, Sinn Fein, were said to have led to the truce. Terms of the agreement were not made public.

IRA leaders had said there could be no cease-fire unless the demands of 15 of its hunger strikers from Ireland's Portlaoise jail were met. The Dublin government refused but the truce was announced anyway.

It was preceded by a wave of apparently Protestant attacks against a Catholic community whose members support the IRA, the latest violence in the four weeks since the previous truce expired.

Curtailing court staff stops clash with CUPE

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The first court confrontation of the 15-day CUPE dispute was avoided Monday when the B.C. attorney-general's department agreed to CUPE terms for drastically-reduced operations at Victoria Provincial Court and two other centres in Victoria.

Spokesman John Marshall of the locked-out inside workers' Local 388 said: "The attorney-general's office agreed to the terms rather than take out an injunction."

His comment came at the end of a work day filled with rumors that the NDP government would go to B.C. Supreme Court today for an injunction that would keep Victoria Provincial Court at 633 Fisgard, family court at 2020 Cameron and the juvenile detention home at 1125 Pembroke in full operation.

A government source said a bid for an injunction was being considered, but Marshall's later announcement indicated the government had junked the idea.

The possibility of an injunction isn't over, however. Marshall said a new employee-pass system worked out with the government was only good for 48 hours.

Most workers in the three buildings belong to the B.C. Government Employees' Union. When the outside workers' Local 50 of CUPE went on strike Jan. 27, the building at 633 Fisgard was picketed because it is owned by the city.

The 20 BCGEU members who work in and around the three court sections decided not to cross the picket lines and courts were delayed two hours before passes were arranged for seven BCGEU members to keep basic court services alive.

Monday morning, newly locked-out Local 388 took a tougher stand, saying no passes through picket lines would be issued "until management agrees to sit down and negotiate in good faith — unless it's a matter of life or death, or public safety."

This meant CUPE pickets would stay outside the Victoria police station and firehalls, allowing policemen and firemen to do regular work but cutting off weekly supplies to main fuel tanks.

When present supplies run out, police cars and fire vehicles will have to go to service stations for replenishment at a cost higher than the city's supply contract.

The effect of Local 388's tougher stand was more drastic on these buildings:

Tax rebate buyers under B.C.'s guns

The provincial department of consumer services is planning its first prosecution against income tax rebate companies.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Monday a new regulation added to the Trade Practices Act and becoming effective this morning would enable her department's lawyer to proceed with prosecutions against income tax loan companies charging exorbitant interest rates.

The new regulation states that B.C. courts may now look into tax rebate schemes where the consumer receives such a small amount from the rebater that the result is judged to be "harsh or inequitable" to the taxpayer.

Ms. Young said the new regulation permitting her department to launch court action was "not a total answer" but that it would enable both consumers and her department to fight the worst cases in court.

Neither Ms. Young nor deputy minister William Neilson would name the worst offenders, or state when the first prosecution would begin.

"Just watch," Neilson said.

Ms. Young said her decision, with cabinet backing, to take action against tax rebaters came as a result of the reluctance of federal authorities to make the first move.

"Ottawa has all the power in the world to put these rebaters out of business," she said, "but the federal authorities are taking forever to crack down on these outfits." Ms. Young said all Ottawa had to do was make it illegal for a tax rebate to go to anyone but the taxpayer meriting the rebate.

While most tax rebate businesses came in for harsh words from the minister, she said the main thrust of her legal staff would be against those obviously charging too much for their "advance loans."

The minister said one of the worst cases her department had come across so far involved a company charging an interest rate so high that it worked out to 4,000 per cent annually.

She declined to name the firm, and when Neilson was asked if this would be the first company prosecuted, he again answered, "Just wait, just watch."

"This is not the first year tax refund buyers have operated in this province," the minister said, "but this year there seems to be a new twist to their operations. In previous years, a person who sold his refund for an agreed percentage — say 50 per cent — usually received that 50 per cent in cash immediately.

"This year, people are selling their refunds in the same manner and, we think, under

Hamburgers better than prime rate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Bank of America asked some children to define the prime interest rate.

"That's easy," said Mark Cabrera, 10. "Mom cooks it when we have company. It's expensive. I like hamburgers better, anyway."

Darren Scola, 11, said the prime rate "is a new game — like Monopoly."

Jeff Crenshaw, 9, said his father had exceeded the prime rate while driving and got a ticket.

Rebels on offensive in fight for airport

ADDIS ABABA (AP) Fierce battles with rifles, bazookas, rockets and machineguns were reported Monday night in a rebel attempt to gain control of the airport at the besieged northern provincial capital of Asmara, where one-third of the Ethiopian armed forces are bottled up.

Diplomatic sources said Ethiopian troops apparently repulsed the attacks on Johannes airport. The field is the only supply link to northern Eritrea province, with land routes already severed by Moslem insurgents demanding an independent state.

During the day Ethiopian jet fighters bombed rebel zones north of Asmara and a government unit lured out of the city was ambushed and virtually wiped out, the sources said.

Reliable reports said the insurgents had passed word to the army that it could repair a damaged generator, but when engineers and their escorts arrived they were cut down in a crossfire. Casualty figures were not available.

Diplomatic sources say heavy fighting that erupted about two weeks ago has left 4,000 dead, wounded or missing among the rebels, government troops and civilians.

They reported the Addis Ababa military government, worried about the fate of 20,000 soldiers encircled in Asmara, has sent truce overtures to the Eritrean Liberation Front. But the popular Liberation Front, a Marxist faction that joined the ELF, immediately rejected any ceasefire. A front spokesman in Beirut, Lebanon, said there is "no choice but to continue fighting as long as Ethiopia occupies our country."

Diplomats believe the 20,000 troops sent to hold Asmara are one-third of Ethiopia's military strength, and the government fears its manpower is spread too thinly to maintain control in other revolutionary-minded provinces. The Asmara army units are battling an estimated 6,000 rebels who are well equipped with sophisticated weapons supplied by sympathetic Arab countries.

Week-old news grabs attention

There was something familiar about the CBC's National news on Channel 2 and 6 last night — it was a week old.

Somebody in Toronto, where the program is taped and then transmitted for the various time zones via Anik satellite, picked up the Monday, Feb. 3, reel by mistake.

CHECK-TV in Victoria was jammed with phone calls, of which about 50 got through. CBUT in Vancouver was so besieged that the telephone exchange plugged up, registering a busy signal after five digits were dialed. CBC Toronto just wasn't accepting calls.

The rerun program and the phone calls went on until near the end of the broadcast, when an apology went on the air.

CBUT then broadcast the correct tape, but CHECK went ahead with its own local news.

"Well, we know people are paying attention, anyway," said a harassed CBC employee.

Onassis better after operation

PARIS (UPI) — A spokesman for shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis said Monday the Greek millionaire underwent an operation over the weekend at a hospital where he is being treated for a mysterious illness. "It was a small operation and now he is feeling much, much better," a spokesmen said.

What is teen heiress' fate?

In triple-killer's clutches

LONDON (UPI) — Police disclosed Monday that missing teenage heiress Lesley Whittle was kidnapped by Britain's most dangerous criminal, a triple killer known as the Black Panther and the Hood.

Miss Whittle, 17, was kidnapped from the bedroom of her home in Highley on Jan. 14. The kidnapper subsequently telephoned a demand for $120,000 ransom, but never showed up at the rendezvous point to pick it up.

No trace of Miss Whittle, who inherits $480,000 from her late father's estate when she turns 21, has been found.

A police spokesman said a nationwide hunt is on for the kidnapper, "the most dangerous criminal at large in Britain." A reward of $60,000 has been offered for information leading to his arrest.

Police broke a two-week news blackout on the case to say the kidnapper was definitely the same man who killed three postal workers with a shotgun last year in the Midlands.

"This wanted man is a cold, very calculating individual who is ruthless when cornered," Detective Chief Superintendent Robert Booth said. "Don't have a go at detaining him. Tell us your suspicious and we'll do the rest."

Booth said the definitive clue in the case was the kidnap getaway car, found 150 yards from where night watchman Gerald Smith surprised the man and was shot down by him. Smith lived to provide a description.

The nicknames Black Panther and the Hood are derived from the fact that the man dresses in black and occasionally wears a hood.

According to the police, the man is between 30 and 40 years old, stands about five-foot-six and is of slim, athletic build. He is said to have carried out more than 100 armed robberies.

The reward for information leading to his arrest was offered by the National Federation of Subpostmasters, whose membership includes the three shotgun murder victims.

Fishing strike Sunday?

A possible province-wide strike affecting 800 Vancouver Island fishermen and 300 shore-workers could take place Sunday.

Some 3,000 B.C. herring fishermen, members of United Fishermen and Allied Worker's Union and Native Brotherhood of B.C., have voted 96 per cent to reject an employers' wage offer of $75 a ton to seine crews and $150 to gillnetter crews.

Local 24 of the union (Victoria, Sidney and Sooke branch) voted 62 per cent to reject the offer which, according to Elgin Neish, secretary-treasurer of the local, represents a cut from last year's prices of 43 per cent to the seiners and 40 per cent to the gillnetters.

Rejection of the offer from the Fisheries Association of B.C. means there will be no fishing by 800 Vancouver Island union and brotherhood members when the West Coast roe herring season starts Sunday, unless a new offer is made before then.

According to Neish, this will affect fishermen in Alert Bay, Sointula, Campbell River, Port Alberni, Sidney and others.

While most Island fishermen have boats equipped to catch salmon as well as herring, the herring is an important mainstay in local fishermen's yearly income.

"The major salmon fishing season does not open until April 15," Neish said, adding that many fisherman are eager to get out early to meet their mortgage payments."

Herring fishing opens for gillnetters Sunday in Area 18, off the east coast of Vancouver Island, from north of Duncan to south of Sidney. Other areas open between Feb. 23 and March 15.

The union and brotherhood are asking for a cost-of-living increase of 14.24 per cent above the 1974 prices, which were $131.50 a ton for seine crews and $250 a ton for gillnetter crews.

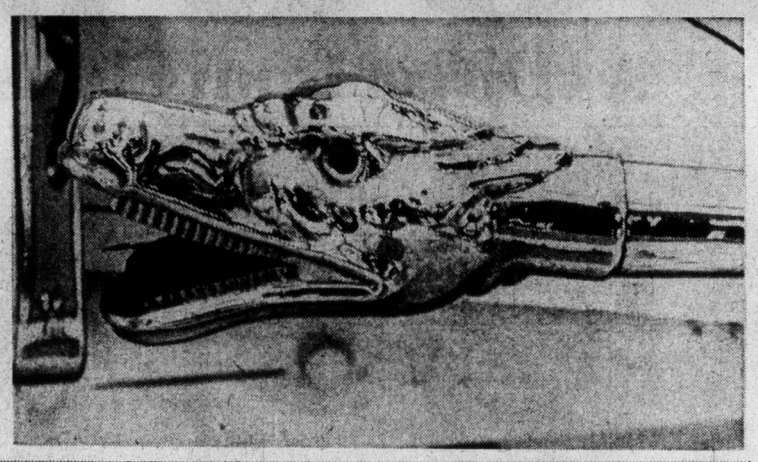

Neish said herring quotas for B.C. fishermen are up 12,000 tons this year to a total of 62,000 and two new herring roe treatment plants have been started in Victoria, yet the fisheries association has offered fishermen half what they received last year in spite of expansion in the industry.

Esquimalt, Sidney CUPE members join picket lines

About 100 workers employed by Esquimalt and Sidney municipalities have joined 1,060 other members of Canadian Union of Public Employees in Greater Victoria on the picket lines after being locked out Monday morning.

Janitors and inside workers employed by the Greater Victoria School Board are the only workers involved with the regional bargaining committee who are still at work. The regional committee negotiates for Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Sidney, the Capital Region, and the board.

Jim Walker, president of CUPE local 50, which walked off the job in the city of Victoria two weeks ago, said the Esquimalt and Sidney lockouts were "expected."

"The employers have just locked out more employees and it looks like they're not prepared to go back to the bargaining table for some time," Walker said.

The Victoria city outside workers are the only CUPE workers who have gone on strike. Workers in other municipalities were locked out as employers made good their threat to meet a strike in any one jurisdiction with an area-wide shutdown.

The CUPE locals involved in negotiations with the regional bargaining group met Sunday and formed a regional bargaining group of their own.

Walker, who chairs the union group, said that "at any time management wishes to approach us, the area bargaining committee is now ready to meet with management and resume bargaining," but the locals will no longer bargain separately.

Walker also criticized the city for operating Memorial Arena for such commercial ventures as Victoria Cougars hockey games. The arena is closed at all other times as a result of the strike.

"Management is operating it for commercial things and the kids are suffering because the city wants to bring in money," Walker said.

Meanwhile, picket lines around Hartland Road dump parted late last week to allow Victoria General Hospital to dump a load of hospital refuse.

Use of the dump is gradually diminishing, according to strikers at the site. Pickets are not blocking traffic — only informing drivers that the picket line is legal.

Non-union employees ready for last resort

Circulating among Esquimalt's seven non-union employees, left to run the municipality after their CUPE workers were locked out Monday, is a list of each of the seven's home phone numbers.

And at the bottom of the list is the number for Dial-A-Prayer.

Minister wonders

Lawyers to give cash discount?

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young is wondering if lawyers will give clients a five per cent discount for paying cash when they start accepting credit cards as payment for legal fees.

Benchers of the B.C. Law Society have approved the credit card proposal in principle and hope details will be worked out in a couple of months.

"Master Charge and Chargex will be making a lot of money, the client will be paying 18 per cent interest on the fee directly, and someone will be paying the five per cent charge levied by the credit card companies on the firms they collect for," she noted.

"It's hard to see how that is going to prevent bad debts, but it will put the onus upon someone else to collect."

Ms. Young suggested that lawyers concerned about a client's ability to pay should allow monthly payments directly to the firm.

Consumers Association of Canada provincial president Ada Brown agreed with Ms. Young.

"I am really concerned about this," she said. "I feel this is probably going to create more problems for the people in need of legal services," Ms. Brown said.

"I would have thought that if the lawyers aren't prepared to carry monthly charges themselves, they would have steered their clients to bank or credit unions where loans are cheaper than by credit card."

Ms. Brown felt that anyone in need of legal services probably had enough problems without being advised to use a credit card to pay the bill.

"However, I guess if one is up against it with a legal problem, one would pay as best one could just to get the advice—and legal fees are prohibitive so that few people would have cash on hand for payment."

Victorians rise to salute the great Russian cellist

A Review

By JON FERRY

London Promenaders do — but Victoria symphony-goers don't — tend to get off their theatre seats and stand-clap their ovations.

But that's what they did, the over-60s crowd 'n all, Monday night to show their affection for that great impish-looking Russian cellist Mstislav Rostropovich.

The Royal Theatre features the disaster epic The Towering Inferno these days but Sunday and Monday it strummed and danced to the tunes of Antonin Dvorak.

And Rostropovich's rendering of Dvorak's Concerto for Cello and Orchestra dispelled all those worthless-seeming Victoria symphony squabbles like day chases night.

Violinists will disagree but the cello — in the right hands — is the most sensual of instruments.

Cellist Rostropovich in thumb position

It has a gritty sweeping edge that enables performers, like the Russian, to play unashamedly romantically with tense throbbing vibrato — without descending into drivelling sentimentality.

And violinists will have to concur that Rostropovich toying away in thumb position (high up on the cello) is sweeter than most of the most bird-like of violins.

He has such command that no one in the audience would have cared if he'd played a few wrong notes (he didn't) or mucked about with the tuning.

Conductor Laszlo Gati said before Rostropovich's second-half showing that the cellist was "a little tired" and had to catch an early plane and so couldn't stay behind to sign autographs.

But the Russian's autograph in fact was better than a paper-scribbling.

He played a piece of unaccompanied Bach. Then left the stage accompanied by two of the women players in the orchestra.

Dvorak, the son of a village butcher and publican, deserves, of course, a little bit of the credit.

It was after all the cellist performing the cello concerto.

He (Dvorak) showed his village dancing roots in the first half of the concert in the Carnival Overture, crisply played by the orchestra, in the Scherzo Capriccioso (out of fairyland) and three thumping syncopated Slavonic dances.

And he caused the crowded theatre lobby to bubble over with exuberant chitter and chatter during the interval — before the small, bald-pated Russian took the stage.

Aldermen cross CUPE line

Esquimalt aldermen on their way to a special council meeting Monday night crossed — without incident — picket lines of CUPE employees council had locked out earlier.

But for the three members of council who are union members, the crossing of another union's picket line posed an ethical and constitutional problem.

Both Ald. Conrad Lundgren, a member of the International Association of Machinists, and Ald. Larry Mann, a member of the B.C. Government Employees Union, got picket passes from CUPE Local 333 before going to the meeting.

But Ald. Art Mebs, a member of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, did not bother to get one because he believes that he serves neither union nor management but the taxpayers as an alderman.

Recycle depot continuing?

The Capital Region Board will reverse its decision to lock-out recycling depot employees, if Saanich Ald. Mel Couvelier has his way.

Couvelier hopes chairman Jim Campbell will reconsider the decision to close the depot when the board meets Wednesday meeting.

The decision "can't be justified under any circumstances," Couvelier said. "It has imposed a ridiculous hardship on the population, when use of the depot should be encouraged.

"I haven't talked to any municipal official yet who doesn't feel strongly that the depot should never have been locked out," Couvelier added.

He said he could see no reason to lock out the depot's many volunteer workers in particular.

Because the depot is on municipal property, the union must be consulted before it can be reopened, Couvelier said.

"The pickets are right on the street on Borden. We would have to persuade them to move the pickets closer to the municipal yard's gates so people won't have to cross a picket line to use the depot," he said.

But he is optimistic the union will co-operate.

The depot has four full-time employees and some part-time employees who are subject to the lockout although they are not union members.

Problems of three Rs touched on by trustees

By NANCY BROWN

The problems of the Three Rs — or the lack of them — got the once-over-lightly treatment from Saanich school trustees Monday night, with a further installment due at the next meeting.

Trustee Walter Tangye, a school teacher for 14 years, said he is appalled at the lack of reading ability, poor sentence and paragraph construction, and spelling of students.

"I am amazed," he said, "that the area of a circle should be a mystery to many of our students."

But trustee Rubymay Parrott didn't entirely agree with him.

She didn't feel that kids today know less than those of her school days.

"How about the 15-year-old who kept a seat warm in Grade 6 for three years before he was old enough to leave school?" she asked.

She said she recently sat on a committee trying to define a core curriculum.

"It was defined as the study of skills and knowledge authorized by the minister of education to make sure every student becomes functionally literate.

"What," she asked, "does functionally literate mean?"

And, she asked, would the board want every child to have the same set of skills, whether or not they were interested in math or science?

"Are we going to say 'by the time you finish Grade 8, by gosh, you are going to be able to spell?' "

Tangye said remedial courses are needed.

"But in these days of friendly relations between students and teachers, no teacher in his right mind would attempt to teach remedial courses. He would lose popularity."

At present, said Tangye, many students cannot even read a simple set of instructions and carry them out.

District superintendent Eric Lewis said there is a need to improve some obvious things, like spelling, some grammar, math and computation.

There is also a need to make time to teach the subjects.

"We talk about more PE, more French, outdoor education, and so very surely we are going to have less time to teach fundamentals."

At this point it was decided to defer discussion until the next board meeting.

Indians won't burn refuse

The Songhees Indian band has backed away from its offer to burn garbage at Maple Bank in Esquimalt.

Chief John Albany said Monday the band had previously planned to set up a garbage burning operation and charge 50 cents a bag to ease disposal problems during the municipal lockout.

But to avoid conflict "with friends in Esquimalt," and disruption of work on Maple Bank Park, the plan has been abandoned, Albany said.

Marina-housing plan for Crofton

By CRAIG MEREDITH

A Victoria land development firm has presented North Cowichan council with preliminary plans for a comprehensive waterfront development in Crofton.

The proposal by Bullock, Guelph and Associates Ltd., called Mariner's Village, includes a marina, shopping centre, hotel, apartment blocks and a residential area.

The 23-acre development, which includes the old Mount Sicker copper smelter, is just south of the Crofton government dock and ferry slip and fronts on Queens Street.

The site consists of open grassland, with a gentle slope to the northeast in the direction of Vesuvius Bay on Salt Spring Island.

The seaward side has been used in past as a tailings dump and is covered to an undetermined depth with fine black tailings.

The other side was the site of the Mount Sicker copper smelter, and is now a jumble of concrete foundations and old trackage.

The developers have requested that Environment Canada do an environmental impact study on the site, especially in the foreshore area where the mine tailings were dumped.

The proposed marina with breakwater, which is on a separate marine lot of four acres, would accommodate an estimated 330 power or sailboats and have the necessary services for the boating public.

A further 35,000 square feet, the developers say, would be available for future developments which might include a yacht club.

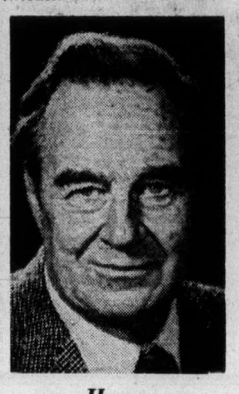

The hotel would have 60 rooms and include a beer parlor. The proposed apartment block, with 48 units, would occupy the site of the old smelter with the bottom floor at marina level. More apartment units are planned, but phased development is envisaged.

A minimum of two acres would be provided for the development of a shopping centre. The developers say in their proposal that if the community of Crofton requires more shopping area it could be made available.

The lowest density is planned in the southwest upper end where 33 single housing units would be located.

Toward the lower part, 18 duplexes would be built near the apartment blocks and row housing, which is planned.

Acting Mayor Dennis Hogan was reluctant to comment on the proposal and emphasized that these were only preliminary plans which haven't received council approval as yet. He also said the seven-member advisory planning commission will be studying the development at its meeting this week.
